Douglas Flies To Berlin for Parley With Clay on Crisis

Moscow Silent On Three-Power Protest on Food, Fuel Blockade

Berlin, July 11 (AP).—Lewis Douglas, American Ambassador to Britain, flew to Templehof Airdrome tonight and went into immediate conference with Gen. Lucius D. Clay over the Berlin crisis.

Douglas was to receive a complete report from the American military governor.

The American Ambassador had a leading hand in the three-power protest to Russia asking that the blockade be lifted. Responsible officials said he probably would plan the next Western Allied move if Russia rejects the Allied notes.

No Comment From Moscow

Clay's offices said today they had received no indication that Moscow was ready to reply to the three-power protest over the three-week-old food and fuel blockade. The Moscow press and radio made no comment on the Berlin crisis.

Tonight's conferences were at General Clay's residence. His political adviser, Ambassador Robert Murphy, took part.

Douglas arrived at busy Templehof as Western airmen were topping the 1000-ton food target for the third straight day.

Douglas told newsmen his quick trip to Berlin was not part of any particular Western Allied diplomatic maneuvering.

Some Believe Break Near

Some observers believed a break in the situation was near, but no available facts bolstered this theory.

Rumors, spread by German news agencies, said Marshall Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian military governor, would be transferred to a field command when the present crisis is over. These could not be confirmed.

Flying in bad weather the American Air Force kept up a wartime tempo. In a 24-hour period ending at 2 p. m. today the Americans said they had flown in 1038 tons of food and other supplies on 190 flights.

U. S. Air Force officials said they suspect the Russians are trying to play a "little war of nerves" against Allied fliers. This they do by announcing Soviet planes will make practice flights into the British-American air corridor. These announced flights apparently never take place, the American officers said, and they added the Russian tactics failed to make any impression on Western Allied pilots.

From American highway checkpoints it was learned the Russians still had not applied their new restrictions on Allied motor traffic between Berlin and western Germany. The Russians said Friday they would require special Soviet

Columbia Teacher Quits, Charging 'Red Infiltration'

New York, July 11 (U.P.).—Dr. Arthur Prudden Coleman today resigned as assistant professor of Polish language and literature at Columbia University in protest against Red "academic infiltration."

In a letter to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, college president, Dr. Coleman said he had been thinking of resigning since the university accepted an initial $5000 grant from the Polish government to establish a chair of Polish studies in the university.

Dr. Coleman said he did not believe a university should accept money from a government "which denies . . . the most elementary democratic rights to large sectors of its population."

He called the Polish grant a "Greek gift" and said it represented Polish "academic infiltration."

Eisenhower was not available for comment.

First Factional Attack

Israel Accuses Bernadotte Of Condoning Arab Violence

Lydda and Ramle Fall to Jews in Biggest Victory

Cairo, Egypt, July 11 (U.P.).—The Jewish army, in its biggest victory of the Palestine war, captured the towns of Lydda and Ramle at dusk today. Lydda Airport fell to the Jews yesterday.

The towns, biggest on the coastal plain still remaining in Arab hands, surrendered after an ultimatum in which the Israeli army offered the respective mayors the choice of capitulation or destruction.

[Two Egyptian Spitfires dive-bombed Jerusalem today for the first time in the Holy City's history, according to an Associated Press dispatch. A Jewish airstrip on the western fringe of the city was apparently the target.—Editor's note.]

Jews Keep Advancing

Israeli troops, after taking Lydda and Ramle continued to advance, it was indicated. They were permitting refugees to filter through their lines but were seizing all vehicles.

Jerusalem dispatches and Egyptian front dispatches indicated that a big new battle was shaping up in Jerusalem, and that Jewish shock troops were preparing an attempt to storm into the Arab-held Old City area.

Jewish mortar batteries bombarded Arab positions in the Old City.

Mediator's 'Apology' Prejudices Peace, Spokesman Says

Lake Success, July 11 (AP).—A spokesman for the government of Israel today accused Count Folke Bernadotte of apologizing for Arab aggression, and prejudicing Palestine peace efforts.

The Jewish attack on the U. N. mediator came on the eve of his arrival from the Middle East. It marked the first time either the Jews or Arabs openly have assailed the Swedish count, who has been seeking for weeks to bring them together.

Declaring that the Arabs rejected a truce extension and resumed their war of aggression, a spokesman for the Israeli government said in a statement to newsmen:

"The mediator does not facilitate appropriate action under the U. N. Charter when he raises unjustified doubts about the finality of the Arab rejection, and minimizes the scale and character of Arab aggression.

Objects to "Incidents"

"According to press dispatches from Rome, Bernadotte described renewed Arab attacks as incidents. When human lives are lost, when a truce is flagrantly violated and when the Security Council is defied, it shows a lack of sensitivity to describe all these as incidents or to suggest as Bernadotte does that the Arabs had some reason for saying no.

"Such an apology for aggression

Russia Denies Col. McMillin Talk With Son

Army Sergeant Said Lured From Moscow Post by 'Paramour'

By the United Press

Col. James M. McMillin of Boulder, Colo., tried but failed to arrange an interview with his soldier son who was lured by love or politics from his Army post in Moscow, it was disclosed yesterday.

The son, Sergt. James M. McMillin, jr., 21, was a code clerk in the American Embassy. He disappeared, reportedly with his Soviet girl friend and reputed paramour, on the eve of his projected return to this country.

His father, a West Point graduate and career officer, apparently wanted to satisfy himself as to his son's welfare and future plans, and to learn whether the State Department or Russia had given the right version of the episode.

The State Department said it was "obvious" that young McMillin was seduced and exploited by an experienced Soviet agent, Mrs. Galina Dunaeva Biconish, beautiful 21-year-old wife of another American soldier, to get important military secrets.

Russian propagandists immediately countered that McMillin had refused to return to the United States in protest against its "anti-Soviet" leanings. They offered a "letter" he allegedly wrote as proof of their version.

Informed sources said the father first asked the State Department to let him go to Moscow and interview his son personally. He was refused, allegedly on grounds Russian officials would refuse to grant the interview and that his trip to Moscow would be wasted.

He then suggested, and the Department agreed, that the Soviet government should be asked to let an American official of the United States Embassy interview his son.

This time the Russians refused, saying that young McMillin did not want to see or talk to any Americans. It was not clear whether the State Department advised Moscow that the request originated with McMillin's father.

Latest reports from Moscow, received last week, said that McMillin and Mrs. Biconish are living together in one of the better Mos-

Meat Supply Held Shortest On Record

Scarcity Seen Acute Through Summer as Prices Hit New Highs

Chicago, July 11 (U.P.).—The Nation's supply of meat in relation to demand is one of the shortest on record, a market analyst said tonight.

He said the situation would remain "acute" throughout the summer.

The estimate of H. M. Conway of the publication National Livestock Producer came after a week of soaring livestock and wholesale meat prices.

The United States Department of Agriculture reported yesterday that livestock and wholesale meat were selling for the highest prices in United States history and that only a "stiff consumer" boycott could stop the spiral.

Hogs especially climbed to new all-time highs at some markets and choice beef hit new tops during the week. Wholesale meat prices rose as much as 5 cents a pound in Chicago.

Conway did not supply comparative figures but said his estimate of a short supply was made in relation to a big increase in consumer demand.

"Considering population growth in the past decade and prevailing full employment, the current prospective meat supply is very inadequate," Conway said.

He blamed the short corn crop last fall and the recent packinghouse workers' strike for the restricted supply of meat. Conway said lack of corn discouraged production of beef in feed lots and slowed up hog production.

Conway said livestock prices would remain high during the summer and that meat might be short for another year.

Although the Agriculture Department forecast an all-time record corn crop for 1948, Conway said it would be "some time" before the increased supply of feed could be converted into meat. Other experts said it might take a year before bumper 1948 feed crops could be reflected in more meat.

The Washington Post Poll

73% Think a Red Relative Should Not Affect U. S. Worker

Seventy-three per cent of Washington residents feel that a Government worker of unquestioned loyalty should be allowed to keep his job even if a close relative is a Communist, The Washington Post Poll reports.

The great majority of these believe that no one is responsible for what his relatives think.

Only 7 per cent agreed with Congressman Crawford (R., Mich.), who demanded the resignation of John C. Virden, Commerce Department official, because of his daughter's position with a Russian news agency. Virden's resignation was not accepted and he still is a Government official.

Thirteen per cent gave qualified answers and said that action taken should depend on the person's job; on his reputation for integrity and trustworthiness; or on how much he is influenced by the relative in question.

The remaining 7 per cent had no opinion, or refused to answer the question.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on interviews with a cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

"Do you think a Government worker should be forced to leave his job if a close relative is a Communist, or is it all right for him to keep it?"

Their replies:

ECA Backs U. S. Capital Used Abroad

American Dollars For Profits Will Be Guaranteed to Foreign Investors

By the United Press

Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, yesterday issued regulations enabling American investors in overseas recovery projects to get the proceeds in United States dollars.

The rules tell Americans abroad how to overcome the shortage of American dollars, and how to qualify for guarantees of up to 100 per cent in converting their aid investments into American money.

A policy statement by Hoffman said the guarantees "can be of great value in aiding recovery." It urged interested United States investors to file applications, or consult ECA officials "as soon as possible."

Aid to Marshall Plan

Hoffman said the guaranty provision may prove to be the Marshall Plan's best way of employing 'private trade channels." He added that the program is designed to "offer substantial inducement to American capital to seek profitable employment abroad."

For example, an American steel manufacturer who invested in a French steel mill, and qualified for a guaranty, would be sure that francs earned from steel sales or from the sale of the plant itself could be converted into dollars by ECA at the prevailing rate of exchange.

He would not be protected from fluctuations in the value of the franc, or from "ordinary business or political risks." But he would know, at a time when American dollars are hard to get, that his French earnings could be converted into American cash.

Informational Media

Up to 10 million dollars in guarantees can be authorized by ECA under the program to expand the circulation of American "informational media"—movies, newspapers, radio and the like—to help spread "a true understanding of American institutions and policy among the nations."

Guarantees would cover conversion of earnings from sale and exhibition of products overseas.

All applications for guarantees must be approved by the country concerned and by Hoffman. ECA approval will depend on the degree to which such investments will help the recovery program.

Fee of 1 Per Cent

Hoffman said the 1 per cent a year fee authorized by Congress will be charged unless "unusual circumstances" make a smaller fee desirable. Another congressional restriction limits all guarantees to 14 years.

Applicants, under the new ECA regulations, must supply information on the amount of the investment and full data on the project itself, including the time required to complete it and details of its financing.

Applicants also must furnish information on their own experience, trade references, evidence that

Democrats in Bitter Dispute Over Douglas-Barkley Rivalry; Leaders Seek to Rally Party

Justice Held First Choice of Truman For Running Mate; Decision Seen Today

By J. R. Wiggins
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 11.—Differences over the Vice Presidency have thrown the Democratic high command into a bitter quarrel.

Personal efforts of President Truman to induce Associate Justice William O. Douglas to agree to accept the vice presidential nomination precipitated the controversy.

Those supporting the candidacy of Justice Douglas and those opposed to it (including the supporters of Senator Alben W. Barkley) are involved in a dispute almost as angry as the platform row over the civil rights issue.

Until late tonight the vice presidential race looked like a waiting contest.

Leaders seemed to be waiting to find out the nominee preferred by the President.

Looking for Strongest

The President was believed to be waiting for some candidate to demonstrate preponderant strength.

Everybody else was waiting to find out if Douglas would take the nomination if he could get it.

Senator Barkley, the 70-year-old Senate minority leader, a strong favorite for the vice presidential nomination Saturday, was described by his foremost supporters as in an even better position Sunday night. Reports of the Douglas negotiations had annoyed Barkley's friends, however. One of them quoted Barkley as saying he was not going to be interested in "biscuits that had been passed to everyone else first."

Truman Talk Reported

Douglas, in spite of his Saturday statement that he intended to stay on the Supreme Court, was catapulted back into the race by a reliable report that President Truman had talked with Douglas by telephone without getting a "yes" or "no" answer.

Senator Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told a press conference that he did not believe Justice Douglas had decided whether he would accept the vice presidential nomination.

"Friends of Justice Douglas have been in communication with him and with me but no decision has been reached," McGrath said.

He declared the convention still "wide open" as far as a vice presidential nominee is concerned. He said he did not know if President Truman had been in communication with Douglas. From available information he concluded it was "a fair assumption" that the justice had not reached a decision.

Asked if Douglas would be ac-

Roosevelt Policies Pledged

Pepper Announces Candidacy, Disclaims Southern Support

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 11.—Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) announced himself here tonight as the presidential candidate of the "liberal, progressive forces" in the Democratic Party and claimed sufficient votes to stop the nomination of President Truman on the first ballot.

Pepper, whose nomination is sponsored by a group of anti-Truman Democrats led by William Ritchie, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Nebraska, refused to predict how many votes he might win on the first ballot but he said he was a serious candidate and expected to pick up strength as his candidacy became known throughout the country. Ritchie predicted that Pepper would have between 300 and 400 votes on the first ballot.

At a press conference which resembled bedlam crossed by a Hollywood rally, Pepper announced his candidacy in the disheveled Eisenhower-for-President headquarters which already have that dark brown "morning after" look.

The Florida Senator, who says he is sure of six and a half votes from Florida's 28-member delegation, specifically renounced any hope of picking up votes from the unhappy and dispirited anti-Truman Southern delegates.

"I do not expect any support from the Southern group nor do I seek to win support from the Southern Democrats," Pepper said. "After all," he told his news conference, "they never supported President Roosevelt either."

He went before the Florida delegation tonight seeking support but the delegation failed to act.

He told his Florida colleagues that James Roosevelt will issue a statement tomorrow favoring him. The Florida Senator said Roosevelt would say that Pepper was the only Southerner who stood a chance of getting any delegate votes outside the South.

Meanwhile, there was a move on foot to get the Southern caucus to support Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas as the South's convention nominee for the presidency. But McClellan has not yet given the go-ahead signal it was reported.

Informed sources said that Pepper would not receive his hoped for support from Americans for Democratic Action. This group

Truman Seems Sure Of Nomination With Convention Opening At 11:30 A. M. Today

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 11.—The curtain goes up tomorrow on one of the most fantastic national conventions in the long history of the Democratic Party.

The Truman Administration is in full command and will remain so, despite the howls that are coming from the right and the left.

President Truman himself will be nominated for a full, four-year term; a man of his choice—still to be picked—will be named vice presidential nominee, and a Truman platform will be adopted.

That is the prospect.

Democrats Lack Fight

What is so strange about it all is that the heirs of Jefferson and Jackson, gathered here in this city of Brotherly Love, seem to have given up the fight even before it has started—and this in a year of roaring prosperity.

It is not merely defeatism; it is a creepy, funereal mood that baffles all who are veterans at these conclaves.

Perhaps it should be called the "cry-baby convention."

The Republicans who met in Chicago in 1932 to nominate Herbert Hoover for a second time, had good reason to believe that they were going to lose. However, they didn't act like these Democrats here in Philadelphia.

The GOP legions who gathered in Cleveland in 1936 were to nominate Alf Landon, destined to lose 46 out of the 48 States. However, they went about their futile busi-

Federal 25% Of D. C. Costs Johnston Aim

Will Make Drive, Should Democrats Control Senate

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 11.—Federal funds shoud pay 25 per cent of the cost of operating the District, Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) said here today.

Johnston told reporters that if the Democrats regain control of the Senate in November, he will make a drive for a Federal contribution equalling 25 per cent of the District budget.

At present figures, such a plan could more than double the Federal grant to the District. The grant is now 11 million dollars a year for general expenses, and one million dollars to the separate city water fund. The city budget for this year is close to 100 million dollars.

Johnston's fight this year blocked congressional passage of a District sales tax. Sales tax sponsors in turn blocked city pay increases.

Johnston said the pay of District employes should be boosted like that of the Federal workers. He said if the Democrats get control of the Senate he would be ranking member of the Senate District Committee, and so would serve on all conferences about District legislation.

He recalled that the Federal Government formerly paid half the costs of operating the District, and said it would be only right now to assume 25 per cent of the load.

The Federal payment was raised in the first session of the Eightieth Congress from 8 to a total of 12 million a year. No serious move was made this year to obtain a further increase.

Civil Rights Main Issue In Platform

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 11.—A Roosevelt-Truman platform, still holding aloft the torn banner of the New Deal, started taking form tonight under constant sniping from the Democratic Party's right and left flanks.

A hand-picked group of five, enlarged today to seven, sweated out the planks in its second all-night session in 48 hours.

The final drive to write a platform under fire got started in earnest after Clark Clifford, counsel to President Truman, conferred for nearly two hours with Resolutions Chairman Francis J. Myers (Pa.).

Clark brought nothing with him in writing, Myers said, but left behind many a Truman cue.

The thunder on the left came from a little group of five platform committee liberals. At a rump meeting in the Warwick Hotel they decided to take their fight to the convention floor if the civil rights plank simply restates the party's 1944 position.

Dixie rebels on the right served equally emphatic notice of a floor challenge or even "a walk" if the plank goes beyond a generalized civil-rights stand.

A working draft of the platform, subject to change when the 18-man subcommittee gets it tomorrow, and subsequent revision in the full committee and on the floor, reportedly called for:

Outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Truman-recommended curbs on prices and inflation.

Comprehensive long-range housing legislation, including public housing.

Federal aid to schools, a national health insurance program and comprehensive expansion of the social security laws.

A flexible system of farm price

Fairfax Prisoners Flee Cell, Enjoy Freedom Briefly

Three prisoners at Fairfax County Jail yesterday picked their cell lock to freedom—only to wind up within a matter of hours back where they started from.

The break turned out a 30-man search party with bloodhounds that combed the northern part of the county until the men were caught.

Recaptured first was Raymond Nash, 18, who surrendered in Fairfax Cemetery half an hour after the break. The second man, Benjamin H. Turner, 29, was caught about 7:15 p. m. half a mile north of Fairfax.

Officer Richard Wahl found the third man, Henry Johnson, 35, hiding in a hole a quarter of a mile from Fairfax High School at 7:45 p. m. Police said Johnson gave up without a struggle when he found himself looking into the business end of a .38.

The escape was discovered by a guard who found the cell door open when he went to feed the prisoners.

Nash was sentenced to 12 months last Wednesday for reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident. He also is wanted in Florida on an auto theft charge.

Turner was awaiting hearing on charges of breaking and entering. Johnson was being held for hearing on charges of grand larceny and breaking and entering.

The break was the first escape from the county jail since January 10, 1947, when three men fled by sliding down a rope of blankets hung from an attic window.

Slayer Seized By Guard Watching In Neighborhood

William J. Carnell, life term prisoner who escaped from Lorton Reformatory Saturday, was recaptured yesterday afternoon when he walked into a drugstore in Southeast Washington.

Capt. John A. Duncan of the Lorton guard detail took Carnell without a struggle after the convicted slayer had walked into a drugstore in the 100 block of 7th st. se., about 4:45 p. m. and sat down at a soda counter.

Donald C. Clemmer, director of the District Corrections Department, said a lookout had been posted in that neighborhood on the chance that Carnell might visit a man recently released from Lorton who lived in the vicinity.

Duncan followed Carnell into the store, Clemmer said, and waited until he had taken a seat, then drew his gun and made the arrest.

The convict, who was unarmed, offered no resistance, Clemmer reported, though he attempted to run when he recognized the Lorton guard official. He halted at Duncan's order.

Carnell, 54, had walked away from his work in the landscape division at the unwalled institution just 24 hours earlier. He had served 17½ years of a life term for the second-degree killing October 6, 1930, of Louis Bush, 60-year-old president and owner of the Gray Lines Motor Tours, a Washington bus company.

For the past three years, Carnell had been a trusty at the reformatory, and officials called him a model prisoner. Clemmer said it was the first escape from Lorton in two years.

Where They Are Needed

Bishops Say Nuns May Teach In Civil Garb in North Dakota

Bismarck, N. Dak., July 11 (AP).—Clothed in civilian dress, Catholic nuns may teach in North Dakota public schools next fall despite recent passage of a measure intended to stop them.

Two bishops of the Catholic Church in North Dakota today advised the nuns that the church has no objection to their donning "respectable secular dress" to comply with the State's new law.

The so-called "anti-garb" act, sponsored by a group of Protestants, including clergymen, prohibits any public school teacher from wearing garb denoting membership in a religious order.

"The act was approved at the June 29 primary election by a majority of some 10,000 votes.

About 75 Catholic sisters teach in the State's public schools, predominantly in Catholic communities.

Two Catholic leaders, Bishop Vincent J. Ryan of Bismarck and Auxiliary Bishop Leo Dworschak of Fargo, announced their proposal today at regular services in cathedrals in the two cities.

Their joint statement said, in part:

"The withdrawal of the sisters would close some public schools in North Dakota. An emergency exists in many districts in this State because of the shortage of teachers, although the sisters are needed elsewhere. In view of the emergency, the sisters will arrange to use in school a respectable secular dress, which in no way indicates the fact that the teacher is a member or adherent of any religious order or denomination.

"Consequently we announce that in such school districts where the people and the school boards find it necessary and desirable to retain the services of the sisters, the sisters will continue to teach, attired in a manner which is in strict compliance with the law."

Philadelphia, July 12 (Monday) (AP).—The Philadelphia Inquirer said today Harold E. Stassen, 41-year-old candidate for the presidential nomination at the recent Republican National Convention, has been offered the presidency of the University of Pennsylvania.

The paper reported Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, was sounded out on the matter shortly after the convention by Robert T. McCracken, chairman of the university's board of trustees.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Senator Barkley, Experienced Keynoter, Due to Put on Good Convention Show

Senator Alben W. Barkley is sure to give the Democrats a good show when he keynotes their convention tonight in Philadelphia.

On his Senate reputation for forensics alone, Barkley would be an effective convention opener. But "Dear Alben" has more than that. He has the experience of having successfully keynoted for the Democrats in 1932 and in 1936, and in each instance his barrel-voiced, convincing oratory has brought delegates to their feet in sustained applause.

Whether Barkley will emerge from the Democratic Convention as something more than a keynoter—as his party's vice presidential nominee—remains to be seen. But if the convention adhered to the Roosevelt tradition, it could choose no man more convinced of Roosevelt's greatness than the 70-year-old Kentucky Senator.

One Break With FDR

Barkley's loyalty to the late President Roosevelt was unquestioning. Only once, in 1944, did he break with the late President, when Roosevelt vetoed a tax bill. This break was soon healed, however.

The "Dear Alben" tag, used so freely in reports of the tiff between Roosevelt and Barkley in 1944, was first affixed to Barkley in 1937, when Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, died suddenly.

To clinch Barkley as Robinson's successor, President Roosevelt made public a laudatory letter to Barkley which began "My Dear Alben." Barkley defeated the late Senator Pat Harrison (Miss.) by one vote, 38 to 37.

Barkley once said, "If being loyal to the greatest President is hanging on his coattails, I'm proud to hang on."

Long Political Career

In politics since 1905, Barkley's rise to Senate Democratic leadership is in the best Horatio Alger tradition. Born November 24, 1877, in Graves County, Ky., Barkley worked in the tobacco patches of his father's farm, tended fires to help pay his way through college (Emory College, Oxford, Ga.) and sold earthenware to finance the study of law (University of Virginia Law School in Charlottesville).

A "muleback campaign" in 1905 elected him prosecuting attorney for McCracken County, and he moved up via a judgeship to Congress by 1913. In 1926 he went over to the Senate, and in 1932, as temporary chairman and keynoter of the National Democratic Convention, he came out openly for repeal of prohibition.

Long before the United States entered World War II, Barkley urged enactment of Lend-Lease as a means to "stop the foul aggressor in his tracks." Near war's end, he headed a congressional committee which saw first-hand evidence of Nazi atrocities in Germany. He was chairman of the congressional committee which investigated responsibility for the success of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor.

Again Award Winner

This spring, Barkley won the third annual Collier's congressional award in the Senate because of his "superb loyalty to the two-party system." In presenting the award, Collier's said that Barkley, "helped to clarify issues on which ballots will be cast in the November election by forcing party-line decisions whenever he could" while striving for "bipartisan effectiveness" in international affairs.

Known for his sense of humor, Barkley is equally famous for his delivery of his favorite song, "Wagon Wheels," which he will sing with little urging.

He married a Paducah belle, Miss Dorothy Brower, early in his career. The Barkleys have three children, David, Marion and Laura.

Senator Barkley, who has built up no lush private law practice, and who has no steady income sources except his senatorial job, once filled lecture engagements to pay doctor and hospital bills when his wife became ill. A "moderately frequent" host to Washington society, the Kentuckian still rides cabs, has no car.

Yet Senator Barkley is a champion of sartorial elegance in the Senate, usually is first to don sport jacket, slacks and two-tone shoes in the spring and bloom out in immaculate white in the summer.

Inflation Record Of GOP Assailed

By The Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), mentioned for the Democratic vice presidential nomination, said yesterday the Democratic Party "is the only group standing for government for the people."

"Only the Democratic Party and the Truman economic policies stand between the people of the United States and a depression," O'Mahoney said in a radio interview.

"The Eightieth Congress failed to do anything to check the rising cost of living; and neither the Republican Convention nor its candidates have given the slightest indication of having any intention of taking effective action.

"The Republican Party, now as always, is the party of the commercial classes."

O'Mahoney said the Republicans are all set "to repeat the mistakes of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover eras.

"The Democratic Party," he continued, "should not be torn by emotional issues—matters of North and South. We should get down to the great fundamental issues which affect all of us. If we don't, if we don't stop spiraling prices, if we don't curb monopoly, the result will be another depression."

O'Mahoney offered figures to support his linking of the Republican Party to "the commercial classes." He said that in 1945 the net income after taxes of the 100 largest manufacturing corporations was $1,943,000,000. He added:

"But in 1947—after the Government, under a Republican-controlled Congress—had ceased to exercise the hand of restraint, net income after taxes of those 100 largest manufacturing corporations skyrocketed to $3,730,000,000."

Douglas Vs. Barkley Schism Splits Democratic Command

ceptable to Truman, McGrath said he was confident Mr. Truman would accept anyone nominated by the convention.

Leon Henderson, chairman of the ADA, said tonight that Justice Douglas had requested that efforts be discontinued in behalf of his nomination for the Vice Presidency, and that ADA would conform to his wishes.

Henderson Hopeful

Henderson had announced earlier that in event of President Truman's nomination ADA would support Douglas for Vice President The former OPA head, following a telephone conference with Douglas said that he "hoped" Douglas would make himself available for the vice presidential nomination. There was no direct word from Douglas himself. A press dispatch from Portland, Oreg., said he was in seclusion at his hotel there and that he declined to answer routine telephone calls, halting all queries at the switchboard.

President Truman, whatever conversations he may have had with vice presidential possibilities, still is willing to come to the support of any candidate demonstrating real strength among the delegates, one highly placed source declared here today.

Another important party spokesman said late this afternoon that "Barkley still is the pitch."

The Senator's friends say that he has not yet been called by President Truman. He has made no effort in his own behalf, but is being boosted by a great many congressional leaders who feel that he would conciliate the South without alienating the liberal elements of the North.

Senator John Sparkman, (D., Ala.) said late this afternoon that he was for Senator Barkley, if the President is for him. Sparkman said there is a strong feeling that the vice presidential nominee should be acceptable to the President and that White House wishes probably would be the determining factor.

The Kentucky delegation is working strongly for Barkley. Without the Senator's authorization, his name was put before the "States' rights caucus" this afternoon by Rhodes K. Myers, former Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, now a State Senator and delegate to the convention. Myers called Barkley a man "who will not repudiate the party or the South." The States'-righters were not responsive. Later, Myers said Kentucky really was for Truman and Barkley.

James A. Farley put an end to a mild boom for his nomination as Vice President. He arrived at the Bellevue-Stratford shortly before lunch. He told reporters he had "no ambitions to satisfy, no axes to grind." He said he was not available for any nomination and would not take it if offered.

Five candidates were named by Farley as "acceptable." He put them forward as his own idea and said he spoke only for himself. He listed Senator Barkley, Senator O'Mahoney, Attorney General Tom Clark, Senator Millard Tydings, Representative Sam Rayburn (Texas).

Farley remarked:

"I don't think Douglas would add as much to the ticket as the others. And there would be considerable opposition to him in the convention."

W. Va. Backs Kilgore

Senator Harley Kilgore of West Virginia was being boomed by West Virginia delegates as a good compromise vice presidential possibility. At the delegation's first caucus this afternoon several delegates strongly indorsed him. Kilgore's name will not be put in nomination, however, if Barkley looks like the winner "without a fight." The group will caucus again at 10:15 a. m. Monday.

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, Wyoming, also has support among delegates. A Midwestern State caucus Saturday hailed him as "a great liberal and effective spokesman of the common man who, uniquely, has had the admiration, the respect and the support of labor, agriculture and business alike."

O'Mahoney spoke at Independence Hall ceremonies at 5 o'clock this afternoon. He urged resistance to "the political and economic imperialism of our time."

Senator Scott Lucas, Illinois, was also being given some support in the vice presidential maneuvering going on around the hotel lobbies tonight. His friends are urging that he would be more acceptable to the South than Douglas and equally acceptable to liberals.

Debate on the Vice Presidency, inside the Democratic high command, has been hot and heavy since last Friday, it was learned tonight.

The Democratic organization here got a report late Friday night that Oscar Ewing and another Administrative official had joined in urging the President to support the Vice Presidential candidacy of Justice Douglas. Some of the headquarters believe Ewing has since been the intermediary between the White House and Douglas.

Opposition to this proposal immediately developed. Chairman McGrath was warned by some of the foes of the Justice that Douglas' nomination would be more violently resisted by the South than the civil rights program. They argued that the South, with this added provocation, would surely leave the party.

McGrath placated the anti-Douglas forces by saying he was not aware of any commitment to Douglas and asserting the field was open. Anti-Douglas elements then got busy behind other candidates. The Barkley candidacy was embraced by them as the best means of stopping any Douglas move.

The struggle between the two factions has continued. It has been calmed by Douglas statements indicating he would not run and revived by reports that he might reconsider. His declaration that he did not intend to leave the Supreme Court seemed to end the quarrel. Then someone suggested he might take the nomination if he could stand for the vice presidency without resigning. Further word on Douglas' wishes was being awaited tonight. Some of his friends forecast a statement by tomorrow.

Douglas now is expected to give a yes or no answer by 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The President is represented as being most hopeful that Douglas will agree to accept the nomination if it is tendered. If Douglas will not consent to run, it is said that the President would then prefer Barkley as a second choice.

supports on a permanent basis.

A strong plank on Marshall Plan foreign policy performance and aid to the new state of Israel.

On one controversial domestic issue, continued Federal control over oil-rich tidelands, it was reportedly silent. The GOP plank pledged return of Federal control to the States.

At a late afternoon press conference, Chairman Myers declined to disclose any provisions of the working draft, but told reporters:

"It will certainly follow the platform of the New Deal—projecting the policies of both Mr. Truman and Mr. Roosevelt."

Myers said the seven-man inner circle draftsmen haven't yet put the civil rights plank on paper, and after some discussion postponed that task until last. Other informants said the group remains committeed "in principle" to the generalized language of the 1944 civil rights plank.

Representative Emmanuel Celler (N. Y.), a leader of the liberal wing demands for stronger language, however, pronounced it "unacceptable."

At a two-hour luncheon conference, Celler discussed parliamentary tactics for a floor fight with Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, former Senator Hugh B. Mitchell of Washington, William Ritchie of Nebraska and Mrs. Ester Murray of California, all members of the 18-man platform drafting subcommittee.

If the full Democratic resolutions committee stands by the 1944 civil rights standard, Celler said the group plans a minority report and a floor motion to strengthen the plank. They want specific mention of anti-poll-tax, antisegregation in the armed formes, anti-lynching, and FEPC.

In addition to a strong civil rights plank, Celler said the group seeks a convention commitment to Mr. Truman's 10 antiinflation points, public housing, aid to education, and a plank naming Arabs as the aggressor and lifting the embargo on arms to Israel.

"If the platform isn't liberal, I think we ought to close shop," said Celler. "This ought to be a 'You cannot live by bread alone' platform. The Democratic Party never wins an election without appeal to low-income and racial minorities."

Told of the Celler-Humphrey group's protest, Resolution Chairman Myers exploded:

"My record in Congress is as liberal as Manny Celler's. Nothing has happened to cause a rump meeting of members from the North, South, East, or West. We haven't even completed the first draft. I certainly can't tell them what's in it until we've finished the job."

"The committee can tear it apart, chew it apart, and decide what it wants," said the Pennsylvania Democrat.

Among the many recommendations before Myers' group was New York Mayor William O'Dwyer's call for (1) a sled-length civil rights plank, (2) repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and (3) financial help to Israel and lifting of the arms embargo.

Not until today did Myers publicly announce the names of the so-called "secret five" who have been blueprinting the platform in an undisclosed hotel hideaway. When he did, two names had been added and newsmen promptly dubbed it the "secret seven." It was learned that an unnamed eighth, from the liberal wing was called in early today.

Announced additions to the group were former Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, raising Southern inner circle membership to two, and Senator Theodore F. Green (R.), unreconstructed New Dealer. Former Gov. Dan Moody of Texas formerly was the South's lone spokesman.

Other previously announced closed circle draftsmen are Myers, Senator Scott Lucas (Ill.), Solicitor General Philip S. Perlman and Mrs. Florence M. Lynch of Iowa.

Albert Hall Mission Bars Ellington Jazz

London, July 11 (U.P.).—American Jazzmaster Duke Ellington was barred today from appearing in Nottingham's main concert hall next week because church authorities said the auditorium is used for religious services on Sundays.

"This is no judgment on Mr. Ellington's performance, but we have to exercise discretion," the Rev. Frank T. Copplestone, minister of Albert Hall Mission, said. "We aim to let the hall be used for high class concerts."

"I have played in church halls all over the States," Ellington replied. "I have every respect and reverence for anyone's religious beliefs, but it is nonsense to suggest my music is in any way irreligious."

Ft. Meade Boys' State Swears in 'Governor'

Fort Made, Md., July 11 (AP).—Charles Sitter of Cumberland was inaugurated today as governor of Boys State. Relatives and friends of the high school youngsters participating in the American Legion-sponsored Government program attended the ceremony in an auditorium at this Army post.

Delegations came from Brunswick, Hagerstown, Bel Air, Cumberland and southern Maryland. The visitors were welcomed by Harry S. Allen, State Legion commander.

Nomination of Truman Seems to Be Certainty

ness gallantly to the tune of "O, Susannah."

There is no music, no fight, in the 1948 Democrats here in Philadelphia.

"Dead" Booms Still Noisy

To add to the bizarre quality of this convention gathering is the noise from the dead booms. Not one of these booms has been given a decent burial.

For example, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower bellowed a loud and final "no" last Thursday.

Nevertheless, his former mess sergeant, a portly, red-faced fellow named Marty Snyder, continues to campaign for Ike day and night. He stands up in a jeep on Broad st., and over a loudspeaker tells passersby about the virtues of General Ike and insists that he be drafted for the presidency.

Likewise, with the followers of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. They pass out handbills and campaign buttons for Douglas, and the fact that Douglas also has said "no" seems to have no affect on them.

Atmosphere of Gloom

The effect of this is to add to the gloom and the atmosphere of demoralization in Philadelphia.

What is the answer to the crack-up that seems to have taken place? The question was put today to James A. Farley, the great political drummer of other days.

Big Jim, in a flash of anger, replied:

"I'm thoroughly disgusted with the actions of some of our leaders throughout the country who apparently have no gratitude for what the party has done for them.

"If they would think a little bit more about their country and their party and a little bit less about their own personal positions, then the party would be in a better position to wage an aggressive campaign in the days ahead."

Men Clearly Indicated

Farley did not name the "party leaders" he had in mind, but he made it clear that he included all those, in the South and in the North, who joined in the "dump-Truman" movement.

This began last winter while the Chief Executive was at Key West for a rest. First, a group of Southern Governors revolted because of Mr. Truman's civil rights program. A little later, there was an uproar in the North over the Administration's Palestine program. Then the rebellion spread to some of the big-city bosses.

The result has been the demoralization that is now to be seen in Philadelphia.

Edward J. Kelly, former mayor and Democratic boss of Chicago, charged today that there had been "commercialized efforts" to spread gloom among the Democrats.

"We have a good candidate and we're going to win," Kelly said. "Let's start talking that way."

Farley, talking in his suite in the Bellevue-Stratford today, said he hoped that the air might be cleared before the convention is over. It seems like a large order.

Barkley Is Keynoter

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who has been with the party through good fortune and bad, will make the keynote speech in Convention Hall tomorrow night and will try to bring some unity to the badly-shattered ranks.

Big Jim, himself, may try it with a speech later on.

It also looks now as if President Truman is coming to Philadelphia. For a time, there was talk of his holding an old-fashioned ceremony at Independence, Mo., and accepting the nomination. However, Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told reporters today that he thought Mr. Truman would come up here to make his speech of acceptance.

Truman Equal to Task

It will be a big test for Mr. Truman. However, everything in his record indicates that he will be equal to it. As Paul Porter once said of him, he doesn't "panic easy."

The convention is scheduled to be called to order this morning at 11:30 o'clock by Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh. The invocation will be said by Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia.

The evening session, at which Senator Barkley will make his keynot speech is scheduled to start at 8:30 o'clock.

Hungary Arrests 3 Catholic Priests

Budapest, Hungary, July 11 (AP). The public prosecutor has placed charges of "incitement" against three Roman Catholic priests and two officials of Catholic Action.

Zsigmond Michalovic, escaped director of the organization, also is accused of being a war criminal. Michalovic, well-known Hungarian journalist, will be tried in absentia. The secretary of Catholic Action also will be tried. The three priests were arrested.

Budapest newspapers said Lajos Dudas, a Communist member of the Yugoslav Parliament, has escaped to this countrty. The papers said "Yugoslav secret police wanted to arrest Dudas because he had accepted the Cominform declaration" criticizing the Tito regime.

Phone Service Lacking Firm Turns to Pigeons

London, July 11 (U.P.).—The telephone shortage got the bird today from an Ipswich furniture company.

After waiting weeks for a telephone to be installed, the company decided to send rush orders to its factory at Lewisham, a London suburb, by carrier pigeon.

Pepper Seeks Nomination

was said to be turning a cold houlder to the Florida Senator.

Pepper opened his press confernce by pledging himself to lead he Democratic Party back to the true policies" of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He said he would drive he money changers from the emple of national and interational finance and bring the Nalion back to Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy in international elations.

Mrs. Pepper Introduced

After that he introduced "my ery much better half," pretty Mrs. ildred Pepper. One fond embrace fter the introduction was repeated ree or four times for the benefit f yelling newspaper, newsreel and elevision cameramen who pleaded or "just one more kiss."

Pepper said he had not talked ver his candidacy with Jake rvey, Chicago political boss, with ayor William O'Dwyer of New ork, or with Frank Hague, New ersey political boss.

He said he had talked with ames Roosevelt, State chairman rom California; with Jack Kroll, ead of the CIO-PAC, and with eon Henderson, leader of Amerians for Democratic Action. He dicated he was hopeful of supprt from these three and those ey represent.

ames Roosevelt Discussed

Ritchie said that his group had scussed the possibility of James oosevelt as a candidate on the epper-for-President ticket.

In addition to Ritchie, the comittee planning the nomination of epper are Harry Carlson of New ampshire, William Shayne of orida, Robert George of Kansas, ugust Scholle of Michigan, a CIO ader; Joseph De Silva of Calirnia, an AFL leader in the Hotel d Restaurant Workers Union, d Joseph M. Baird of New York ty. All are delegates.

Pepper's statement that his candacy had not been discussed by e big city bosses, added to his t renunciation of any support om the sons of Dixie, led to conderable speculation as to where tchie expects to get his estited 300 or 400 votes on the first llot.

Pepper said delegates from 22 ates attended the caucus last ght which authorized a seven-an committee to find a candidate, t both he and Ritchie declined name the States.

Southern delegates in revolt ainst President Truman's civil hts stand tried unsuccessfully day to agree on a candidate to pose the President.

One thing all sides were agreed on—that candidate will not be pper.

tes Rights Caucus

Some 400 Dixie Democrats met an open States rights caucus late s afternoon to discuss how to p Mr. Truman, which they adtted wasn't possible, and secdly, how to prevent the conven-n adopting unwelcomed civil hts planks in the Democratic tform, another apparent impossility.

Southern oratory notwithstandg, the caucus fizzled out with the kly sputter of a firecracker ght in a July shower.

Gov. William M. Tuck of Virnia reported that at a two-hour sed session earlier it had been possible to select a candidate on whom all were agreed.

Former Lieut. Gov. Rhodes K. ers of Kentucky sent up a trial loon in the open caucus with suggestion of Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, Senate minority leader. He said that support of Barkley would be neither a repudiation of the Democratic Party nor a repudiation of the principles of the Southland.

Dispirited delegates sat on their hands.

Caucus Lacks Enthusiasm

Myers later told reporters he was surprised at the lack of enthusiasm in the caucus, and added he would settle for a Truman-Barkley ticket.

John Comer, a delegate from Tennessee, attempted to hang out the Eisenhower flag again. He didn't blame Eisenhower for refusing to pay any attention to Leon Henderson and others of that ilk, he said, but surely the general could not refuse the plea of "the little man."

A little spatter of applause died away in the soggy void.

Myers said of Barkley that "He is the only man, nationally known, who can rebuild the Democratic Party."

The Kentucky delegates said of Barkley that he would not be a party to any move to sidetrack Mr. Truman. They said he would consent to be a presidential nominee only if it becomes evident the great majority of the convention is intent upon displacing Mr. Truman.

Governor Thurman of South Carolina called upon the South to face defeat of the Democratic Party rather than to accept Mr. Truman, who has "stabbed us in the back with his damnable program" (of civil rights).

Some people may lose seniority, he said, and others will lose some "political plums" but defeat, he declared, is far better than loss of principle.

Conceding there is little chance here in Philadelphia to stop the nomination of President Truman, Thurman said that even so the South may yet get a chance to name the next President of the United States.

In the event GOP Presidential Nominee Dewey does not get 226 votes in the electoral college, Thurman declared, and in the event Mr. Truman fails of the necessary number, the election will be thrown into the House of Representatives. There, Thurman suggested, the South might get a chance to have its say.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, told reporters after the caucus it was "impossible"to prevent Mr. Truman's getting the nomination, but, he said, the caucus could register a protest against the civil rights stand.

Separate Convention Possible

He said a separate Southern convention, tentatively scheduled for Birmingham, Ala., later this month, is still "a probability."

"We have made arrangements for it," he said, "in the event it becomes necessary."

That was taken to mean that if Mr. Truman becomes the nominee and the Democratic platform contains a civil rights plank the rebels will hold a rump convention.

Laney, however, joined the growing number of Southerners predicting their delegations will not walk out if Mr. Truman is nominated. Arkansas will probably not walk out, anyway, he said.

Walter Sillers of Mississippi, chairman of the Resolutions Committee of the Anti-Truman Southerners, brought in a report adopted by the group.

Text of Resolution

The resolution, which the caucus instructed the committee to put before the convention as a minority report in the event it fails in the resolutions committee reads as follows:

"Be it resolved by this preconvention caucus of delegates to the 1948 National Democratic Convention that the members of the Resolutions and Platform Committee of the convention from the States participating in this caucus present to that committee a declaration of party principles to be inserted in the party platform as a plan thereof as follows:

"'The Democratic Party reaffirms and pledges strict adherence to those fundamental principles of constitutional representative government laid down by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the party, among which are the doctrines of States' rights, free enterprise and private initiative.

"'And the party declares that the several States shall exercise, free from Federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the Constitution among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefor.'

"And should the committee reject said planks a minority report be filed submitting same to the convention and the chairman of this caucus designate the delegate to present the report and direct the debate on behalf of its adoption."

Pure Americanism

Sillers said the plank is a "pure Americanism" plank declaring for States rights and against the civil rights program recommended to Congress by the President.

The Southerners handed the President a second rebuff by calling for a plank declaring the coastal tidelands to be the property of the States, rather than the Federal Government as Mr. Truman has held.

There were other rebels, too, who were meeting with as little apparent success as the Southerners.

Up until the last gasp tonight, Americans for Democratic Action anti-Communist liberal group, held out for the nomination of Justice William Douglas.

But finally, Leon Henderson, ADA chairman, threw in the sponge. He said Justice Douglas had requested that the efforts be discontinued in behalf of his nomination for the Presidency.

Stress Four Planks

Henderson said ADA would cease its efforts to obtain the Presidential nomination for Douglas.

The ADA executive board voted yesterday to seek these four planks in the platform:

1. Repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

2. A Civil Rights program including FEPC, anti-poll-tax, anti-lynch, and elimination of segregation from the armed forces.

3. A clearcut statement on aid to Israeli.

4. A clear statement on the expansion of valley projects, such as Missouri and Columbia Valley projects.

The board also directed its officers to fight against any attempt to return to the two-thirds rule in the convention.

British Prefer Dewey As Next U. S. President

London, July 11 (NYHT).—A British public opinion survey disclosed today that a majority of the British who have a preference would like to see Gov. Thomas E. Dewey elected President of the United States in November.

The survey gave the British public the same three choices that the American voters presumably will have—Governor Dewey, President Truman and Henry Wallace. Nearly half—48 per cent—of the persons questioned said they had no preference. The three presidential aspirants received the following percentages: Dewey, 23 per cent; Truman, 20 per cent, and Wallace 3 per cent. Six per cent had some other choice, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower being the favorite.

Peace Returns to Philadelphia As Worried Democrats Meet

From Press Dispatches

Philadelphia, July 11.—A fortnight ago there was dancing in the streets of this city of brotherly love.

The Republicans blew into town and put on the doggondest taffy-pull you ever saw. You needed a blocking fullback to run interference through the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford—GOP Convention Headquarters.

There were brass bands and tin horns and confetti banners that caught whatever breeze there was around. People mounted soapboxes and shouted the virtues of Tom Dewey, Hal Stassen, Doug MacArthur, Bob Taft, Earl Warren and others. You got convention feet legging it from caucus to caucus. Smoke poured out of those rooms like it says in the papers.

Today, Philadelphia is as quiet and restful as Harry Truman's back porch at the White House in Washington.

The Truman people rented the suite which served as Stassen headquarters for the Republicans. Hal's boys did it up brown. They had a shapely drum majorette in scanties who kicked up a pretty leg in what passed for a Hoola dance. Thousands cheered.

Nobody was cheering today. It was lonesome going through the hotel lobby and listening to the echo of your own hoofbeats.

This is one time a great political convention probably won't develop a single case of convention feet.

Women politicians, inevitably the acute sufferers, don't have any particular reason to stand around for long hours this time. There are no crowded campaign headquarters; there are no dramatic parades and demonstrations to stand around and watch—although there is plenty of noise. The ladies can take this convention sitting down.

Female advocates of presidential hopefuls ordinarily work long, intense hours corralling ballots, luring susceptibles to fancy shows and social events in the interests of favorite sons. Then they go home exhausted, rumpled and determined not to think of politics until they are caught up on their sleep.

Things are different in Philadelphia today. There's time for midday siestas and the pressing of clothes. There's even time for a lady to rest her feet!

Franklin D. Roosevelt has been dead for more than three years now, but his shadow still lies long across this Democratic National Convention.

Tuesday night, the convention will hold memorial services for the late President. But there's nothing the orators can say then to spell it out more clearly than a Democratic Party worker did today:

"It's a good thing the ghost of Franklin D. Roosevelt isn't around," he said. "We'd probably nominate him."

The sign painter's eyes must have been bigger than his space when he painted the banner for the Oklahoma delegation in the lobby of the John Bartram Hotel. It says: "Oklahoma Headquart's."

N. Y. B-17 Believed En Route to Israel

White Plains, N. Y., July 11 (NYHT).—A B-17 heavy bomber, loaded with an estimated 3500 gallons of fuel and carrying at least 10 persons, took off from Westchester County Airport today without filing a flight plan. It is believed that the plane is being flown to the Haganah forces in Israel.

Neither the pilot, who gave his name as A. Frederick, nor anyone else connected with the flight would give any information concerning it.

Whitehurst Forces Win In Md. Caucus

Philadelphia, July 11.— Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore tonight was elected Maryland's Democratic national committeewoman.

Mrs. Whitehurst, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was chosen by a vote of 23 to 5 over Mrs. M. Alice Canoles, also of Baltimore, who has served four years as national committeewoman.

Choice of the committeewoman furnished the only note of controversy in a caucus of the Maryland delegation to the Democratic National Convention. The meeting was held in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Delegates Instructed

Maryland's Democratic delegates were instructed by their State convention last month to vote for President Truman's nomination to continue in office, and for Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) for the vice presidential nomination.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., was chosen to be chairman of the delegation and was reelected as Maryland's Democratic National Committeeman.

He was asked before the meeting to comment on the fact that his name has been in the list of Vice Presidential possibilities.

"I am an instructed delegate," he said.

To Caucus Today

Virginia's delegates are to caucus at 10 a. m. Monday. A number of their members turned out today for the anti-Truman States rights meeting of Southrn delegations. Gov. William Tuck of Virginia said the group was instructed to vote against any sponsor of the civil rights legislation on the balloting for the presidential nominee.

Other Maryland delegation officials chosen unanimously at the night caucus included:

Vice chairman, Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., of Baltimore; secretary, William H. Bishop, jr., Baltimore; platform committee, United States Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman and Mrs. Mary L. Nock of Salisbury; credentials committee, former Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy of Baltimore; committee on permanent organization, Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.).

Committee on rules, Samuel H. Hoffberger, Baltimore; committee to notify the presidential nominee, former United States Senator George L. Radcliffe and Mrs. Canoles, and the committee to notify the vice presidential nominee, Christian H. Kahl, Towson, and Mrs. Canoles.

Honorary convention officials named to represent Maryland were Joseph R. Byrnes, Baltimore, vice president; C. William Hetzer of Williamsport, assistant vice president; T. Howard Duckett, Hyattsville, secretary, and John J. McMullen, Cumberland, assistant secretary.

'Ike's' Backers Call It Quits

The once bustling Veterans-for-Eisenhower headquarters, 3 Thomas Circle, slipped into oblivion yesterday.

Richard L. Hawkins, 3024½ R st. nw., who helped initiate the drive that snowballed into a Nation-wide issue, stopped by to pick up the leftovers and put a lock on the door.

"This is it," he admitted. "It was a gamble, and we lost. So what?"

Hawkins, 33, a public relations man, said Eisenhower's final "no" to Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) did the trick, but still thinks the general made a mistake.

In its brief span the office was responsible for sending hundreds of thousands of telegrams and postcards to General Eisenhower, urging him to accept the nomination. It sparked founding of hundreds of chapters throughout the country.

The whole thing started, Hawkins, an infantry private for four years, said, "one night last December at a party in my apartment."

"We were worried about the dearth of any liberal candidates for President," he explained, "and we felt Eisenhower more nearly than anyone else represented neither the isolationists nor the extreme liberals, but rather the average American."

Capper, 83, Going To Hunt for a Job

By the United Press

Arthur Capper, 83-year-old newspaper publisher and retiring United States Senator, said yesterday he is going job-hunting back in Kansas.

He said in his weekly radio broadcast that he hopes to do a little "writing and politicking—and maybe even do some good in both fields."

West German Rule Due for Settlement

Frankfurt, Germany, July 11 (U.P.).—The question of whether western Germany will tear itself loose from the Soviet zone and establish a separate government is due for settlement this week.

Military governors of the three western zones are scheduled to meet in Frankfurt Thursday to consider the matter.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay of the United States, Gen. Sir Brian Robertson of Britain, and Gen. Pierre Koenig of France will meet to ask the 11 minister-presidents of western Germany why they turned down the Allied offer to allow creation of a new government.

German officials agreed to set up such a regime during their meeting July 8-9 at Coblenz in the French zone, but they recoiled from the term "government."

The German officials wanted to give the new regime an innocuous name such as "United Economic and Administrative Area." Instead of operating under a constitution, as suggested by the Western Allies, the new German regime would be placed under an "organization statute," according to the German plan.

Clay told newsmen July 7 that German proposals for changing the provisions of the six-power London agreement on western Germany would have little chance of succeeding "unless they are willing to settle for less."

Now that the Germans have shown they are willing to settle for considerably less, the next move is up to the occupation chiefs.

Herter Says U. S. Must Help India Make Steel

By the United Press

The United States has "no cause to fear" Russia's current steel production, according to Representative Herter (R., Mass.)

He warned, however, that this country must help India build up its steel output, lest all of southeast Asia fall into the Communist sphere by default.

Herter, vice chairman of the House Select Committee on Foreign Aid, outlined his views in an article written for the current issue of Steelways, an industry publication.

Although Soviet steel production figures are secret, he said, "carefully weighted" Commerce Department estimates put the steel output of Russia and its satellites at about 20 million tons in 1947.

Balanced against this was a production of 88 million tons for the United States and 27 million tons for the 16 Marshall Plan countries.

Czech Reds Plan Purge

By Gaston Coblentz

Prague, July 11 (NYHT).—The Czechoslovak Communist Party announced today that it will "cleanse" itself of all "unwholesome elements" and will immediately halt the mass recruiting of new members.

The party publicly denounced the infiltration of its ranks by "careerist elements and people from the remainder of the capitalist class." The party's present aim is to "increase the ideological standard" of its membership.

This development in Czechoslovak Communist strategy was made public today in an unsigned article in Rude Pravo, the party newspaper.

The Czechoslovak Communist Party said its subordinate "party organizations" have made a "series of grave errors during the mass recruitment of new members in the last few months." The party now contains two million members.

The "basic Bolshevik principle of individual examination and acceptance of each member" is being constantly violated, Rude Pravo said.

"The party can fulfill its role of leadership only when it is a party of the most advanced and responsible men," the article continued. In the future the party will prefer to take new members "from the ranks of the working classes, primarily manual laborers," it added.

This marks a reversal of party practice, for, according to the paper, "some party organizations have even used pressure, especially among office employes, to make people enter the party."

Berliners Cheer Promise To Stop Communism

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, July 11 (NYHT).—Nearly 60,000 Berliners at a mass meeting today cheered and wept as Ernst Reuter, the city's elected but unseated Socialist mayor, pledged that the German population would stick by the Western Allies and make Berlin the "German Stalingrad that will turn back the tide of Communist pressure."

The demonstration was the most dramatic indication to date that many Berlin citizens are prepared to endure the serious hardships imposed by the siege conditions rather than knuckle under to the Russians.

It was the first large public gathering since the drastic cuts in gas and power service in the western sectors at midnight Friday.

Reuter's position as the elected mayor of Berlin has been recognized by the Western Allies but he has been kept from taking his seat by a Soviet veto in the four-power Kommandatura.

Asserting that the Berliners "are in an emergency ready to die in the fight against communism," Reuter said: "We will ward off the Soviet demand for power with our very bodies, if necessary."

"If Berlin falls, the western powers are also finished," Reuter said. "Here in Berlin, communism must be stopped. Berlin will be the German Stalingrad that will turn back the tide of Communist pressure."

The ovations Reuter and other speakers received were the most excited and lengthy this reporter has witnessed during three years in Germany.

Spy-Terrorist Threat Seen By Yugoslavia

Belgrade, July 11 (AP).—Yugoslavia told the world tonight it is defending its borders against "spy-terrorist groups." These groups, it said, were organized by wartime Nazi collaborators now in exile and an unidentified "foreign intelligence service."

The interior ministry of the semiautonomous Yugoslav state of Croatia issued a communique saying the plotters sent 19 groups totaling 95 persons into the country during the past year. The Communist newspaper Borba said Yugoslav security police captured all of them.

The leaders of the spy groups, the communique said, are Ante Pavelic, Yugoslav No. 1 war criminal and premier of the Croatian puppet government during the war, and a Dr. Krunoslav Draganovic.

Borba published the communique today with a long article reiterating the defenses of Premier Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Communist Party against charges of "deviations" made recently by the Communist International Information Bureau.

Pavelic is believed to be in exile in Italy. Draganovic also is believed to have been somewhere outside of Yugoslavia since the war.

Arab League to Meet

A United Press dispatch from Amman, Trans-Jordan, reported that the Arab League would hold an important meeting Monday at Alei, in the mountains outside Beirut, Lebanon, where some of the most critical decisions of the seven Arab countries have been reached.

The dispatch said Trans-Jordan delegates were expected to take a "vigorous" part in discussions concerning Count Folke Bernadotte's appeal for a new truce in Palestine and his proposal to demilitarize Jerusalem and Haifa.

Count Bernadotte commented in Rome yesterday, on his way to United Nations headquarters at Lake Success, N. Y., that his truce appeal was directed individually to the Arab nations and that though the Arab League has announced rejection, the countries concerned have not.

Fighting Everywhere

While heaviest military activity centered at Lydda and Jerusalem, Jewish and Arab communiques and press dispatches reported fighting throughout Palestine.

An Israeli communique said Jewish troops took three villages northeast of Acre, in western Palestine, and admitted that Syrian forces got some high ground in the Sea of Galilee area, which Israelis took Friday.

In the south, both Tel Aviv and Egyptian advices reported heavy fighting, centered in the area between Gaza and Majdal along the coast.

Abdullah Force Idle; Arab Rift Discerned

Tel Aviv, Israel, July 11 (NYHT.).—One military fact stood out today above all the Holy Land's struggles. Since the truce ended, King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan Arab Legion has not begun to attack.

Failure of the Legion, the finest Arab fighting force, to play an aggressive role in the battle's resumption appears to have far-reaching political implications.

First, it indicates that King Abdullah might be prepared to accept a truce along the lines suggested by Count Folke Bernadotte, whose proposals bequeathed central Arab Palestine to Trans-Jordan.

Second, it indicated strongly that the Arab states have become divided, particularly Egypt and Trans-Jordan.

Bernadotte's 'Apology' Hit

does not augur well for any successful resumption by the mediator of his mission.

"It now devolves upon the Security Council to move forward under Article 39 (calling for steps to stop war). Any action to avert or delay this logical and imperative course by whoever it is made is not a contribution to peace."

The Israeli statement came as informed quarters here looked for a resumption of Russian attacks on Bernadotte.

Russia's Andrei Gromyko already has charged before the Security Council that Bernadotte exceeded his authority in laying a new peace plan before the Jews and Arabs. The Soviet delegate also accused the count of trying to sabotage the U. N. decision to partition the Holy Land.

Observers of Council affairs anticipate verbal fireworks when the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister and the mediator face each other.

Bernadotte is schedued to arrive by plane at 12:25 p. m. (EST) Monday. By Tuesday morning, he will be ready to face the council.

The formal call for a council meeting is being held up pending Bernadotte's arrival and announcement of his schedule. He hopes to be back in the Mjddle East by the end of this week.

Montgomery in Vienna For Army Inspection

Vienna, July 11 (U.P.).—Field Marshall Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British imperial general staff, arrived by plane today to inspect British forces in Austria.

He was scheduled to leave tonight for the British zone of Germany.

Montgomery came to Vienna after a four-day stay in Paris where he talked with government and military leaders, reportedly on Franco-British defense measures.

Belgian Liberals Split on Leopold

Brussels, July 11 (U.P.).—The Liberal Party, fourth largest in Belgium, has split wide open over the question of King Leopold's return to the throne, authoritative sources said today.

The Liberals, along with the Socialists and Communists, heretofore have demanded Leopold's abdication in favor of his son, Crown Prince Baudouin, 17.

At a four-hour meeting Friday the party failed to reiterate its three-year demand for the "early" abdication of Leopold and adopted a compromise resolution stating: "All solutions to the royal problem will be explored and eventually envisaged."

Malay Police Kill 3, Take 15 In Red Raid

Kuala Lumpur, Mayala, July 11 (AP).—Malayan police staged a flying raid on an abandoned tin mine near here today, killed three Chinese, and arrested 15 suspected insurgents, they announced.

Four suspected insurgents have been killed and 19 arrested at Kuala Lumpur in the past 24 hours.

Insurgents had been reported grouping in the area for an attack on Kuala Lumpur.

Police activity throughout Malaya continued to increase as a wave of Communist-inspired violence which began more than 10 weeks ago continued.

Three arrests were reported elsewhere in Malaya. Authorities at Alor Star said they had jailed an "important, wanted Communist," and at Sotu Kedha two suspected insurgents were taken.

2 Die as Plane Smashes Flat In San Antonio

San Antonio, Tex., July 11 (U.P.).—A mystery plane plunged out of the darkness over San Antonio early today, careened crazily across the downtown area, grazing buildings in its flight, and crashed into an apartment building and exploded.

Two persons, including the pilot, were killed.

The plane nicked a dozen buildings in its wild flight, narrowly missed two large hospitals and set fire to three dwellings after it crashed.

The other victim, Ethel Haines, 60, was trapped by flames in an upstairs apartment.

Military and Civil Aeronautics authority officials said they were baffled in their investigation.

The ship was at first believed an Army AT-6 trainer, but CAA agent Wortley Rudd said a thorough check of all civil and military airports in the area failed to turn up a missing plane.

Rudd said the plane could not be identified as to type.

The only clew to the identity of the pilot was a laundry mark in his shirt with the name R. B. White.

The plane appeared low over the downtown area shortly after midnight and began swooping dangerously close to buildings. It flew to a residential area about 12 blocks from the business district before suddenly dipping and crashing.

Its gasoline exploded and engulfed a two-story apartment building and two homes in flames.

An unidentified man rescued an 80-year-old invalid man from one building.

British Captain Seeks Women to Man Ships

London, July 11 (U.P.).—Capt. Roy Jackson decided today after 47 years as a sailor that a woman's place it at sea. He wants to man his ship with women.

Jackson is searching Britain for six able-bodied seawomen, a cook and a first mate to run his 240-ton schooner.

"I saw the Wrens in action during the war, and they were so efficient that I am convinced Britania rules the waves," he said.

Adm. Griffin to Head Navy Retiring Board

The Navy said last night that Vice Admiral Robert M. Griffin, a native of Washington, has been ordered from his command of Far Eastern naval forces to become president of the Naval Examining and Retiring Boards.

He succeeds Vice Admiral John H. Hoover, who retired July 1. Vice Admiral Russell S. Berkey, who commanded the support group under Griffin, has relieved him.

District Attorney to Receive Bardwell Case Evidence Today

Police evidence in the recent slash slaying of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell here will be turned over today to the District Attorney's Office for further action, Detective Captain Robert V. Murray, said yesterday.

Decision as to whether to seek grand jury indictment of Eugene H. James, 31, Baltimore janitor, for the crime is up to the District Attorney, Captain Murray said.

Meanwhile, James was in custody of Baltimore police following his arrest there last week for similar slaying of a second 11-year-old girl, Marsha Brill, in Baltimore, last Tuesday. Police said he confessed to both murders to gratify homicidal sexual urges.

Own Flag Raised By North Korea

Seoul, July 12 (Monday) (AP).—Russian-controlled North Korea has raised its own flag and is moving quickly to set up its own government, eventually intending to rule American-occupied South Korea as well.

A North Korean radio broadcast said a North Korean "People's Council" already has decided to enforce its own constitution there "until the time when the constitution comes to be enforced in all Korea." The council also scheduled an election for next August 25 to choose members of the legislative branch.

North Koreans boycotted the general election sponsored by the United Nations last May 10, so balloting then took place only in the south. That election set up a Korean national assembly, now completing work here in Seoul on the country's first democratic constitution.

Five Children Escape Injury As Home Burns

Five children escaped injury yesterday when an overheated oil stove set off a fire which burned down their home at Cloverly, Md.

The mother, Mrs. Gladys Slater, had gone to Philadelphia, according to Sandy Spring Volunteer Fire Department members, leaving the house in care of older children.

The firemen found the two-story, four-room frame house a mass of flames when they arrived and were unable to save the building. Neighbors were caring for the children last night.

Housing Frills

The latest proposed solution of the high cost of housing—gadgetless homes—is likely to arouse as much alarm in status quo circles as did the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill. For it would mean a great blow to the prestige of that long socially entrenched family, the Joneses. Architects and housing experts at the recent New York Institute of Housing and Planning studies didn't consider the social and conversational issues at stake when they advocated cutting housing costs by eliminating expensive non-essential equipment and frills. Let people who wanted reasonably priced homes, they said, come down to earth and abandon their magazine picture dreams of built-in equipment and "miscellaneous heart throbs," as circular windows, fancy railings, widow's walks. Let would-be home owners show some pioneer stamina and demand simple solid, well built houses, minus screened porches, gas fitted fireplaces, tiled baths, hardwood floors and decorative shutters. Thus could contractors' costs be cut.

But where would this leave the Joneses with their stainless sinks, automatic dishwashers, picture windows, electric door chimes, powder rooms, wood-paneled dens, side patios, and other paraphernalia that keep the neighborhood buzzing? Where would it leave the proud new home owners who could only boast to their friends that they had bought a solidly built dwelling at a price they could afford to pay, one with no porch, with carport for a garage, one even without sidewalk, gutter and curbs in front; just a sound livable—but not a "darling" or "precious"—home? Considering all this, we don't think the Joneses need worry. They can go ahead with plans for that mirrored Hollywood bathroom.

Problem Of Abundance

Government forecasts indicate that the wheat crop will be the second largest in our history, while the corn crop will break all previous records. Barring unforeseen reverses, therefore, the farms of this country are expected to produce close to 4.6 billion bushels of wheat and corn—slightly more than the highest previous combined yield attained two years ago. This should be cause for rejoicing in a hungering world that has been relying on the United States to help supplement scanty food supplies. It should also be good news to our own people who are groaning under high living costs. But the prospect is not so rosy from the viewpoint of those short-sighted persons who measure prosperity in terms of prices and the size of dollar incomes. Nor is it an altogether welcome development from the viewpoint of a Government pledged to maintain the prices of wheat and corn at 90 per cent of parity. With wheat prices already nudging support levels, experts are predicting that the Government may have to take over several hundred million bushels of wheat to sustain prices at the levels decreed by price-support laws.

There is, however, a bright side to this picture of abundance in the opinion of those Americans who realize the threat to economic stability resulting from soaring food prices. With a huge corn crop insuring plentiful supplies of grain for feeding, at lower prices, more livestock will be held off the market for fattening. The increased demands of feeders will help to sustain corn prices and will lead eventually to an increase in meat supplies when depleted livestock holdings have been built up. Of course, all these adjustments take time and the effect on retail prices will not be apparent for many months. Indeed, the immediate effect of increased feeding will be a reduction in slaughterings and consequently in meat supplies. Moreover, any sharp declines in meat prices at this time would discourage feeding and prolong the scarcity that has caused meat prices to soar.

But even if the immediate effect on retail prices should prove to be slight, such declines would at least allay fears of worse to come and modify the pressure for wage increases that is currently forcing up prices of nonagricultural products. For the economy as a whole, therefore, a drop in grain prices should be regarded as a salutary development that might save the country from the economic collapse that is bound to come unless inflation is arrested. With floors under farm prices and with abundant yields to offset price declines, there is no reason to fear that a severe, disruptive shrinkage in farm income would result from a corrective downward movement of farm prices.

On the other hand, there is considerable danger that efforts will be made to sustain prices of agricultural products in surplus supply by pushing those surpluses into export outlets in place of goods for which the need is greater. The ECA has a lot of money on hand for purchasing American supplies, and if price-depressing agricultural surpluses build up here, it will be under great pressure to thrust those surpluses on participating countries, even though world crop prospects are reported to be good and food supplies much more abundant. To recognize this danger is the best insurance against succumbing to the temptation of trying to dodge solution of our own price problems at the expense of the nations the United States is pledged to assist.

Gloom At Philadelphia

"The Republicans have their splits right after election," Will Rogers used to say, "and the Democrats have theirs just before an election." The dissident groups who have just redemonstrated the shrewdness of the comedian's observation must feel very foolish as they open their convention in Philadelphia today to do what they have been protesting that they would not do. At no time has there been any reasonable prospect that the Democratic Party could unite on any candidate other than President Truman. Yet the President has been maligned by both the conservative and radical wings of his party. Each group has done its utmost to belittle him and build up support for some other candidate—apparently any other candidate who had a chance of saving the party from defeat in November. If the convention at Philadelphia now meets in a state of deep gloom, as all commentators report, it is in some measure the work of these party wreckers, who, even after General Eisenhower's refusal, continued to fasten their hopes on the miraculous appearance of a little tin god.

It is true, of course, that Harry Truman is a colorless figure who has disappointed the expectations of many of his fellow partisans. It is also true that the Democratic Party is rent by violent disagreements on such issues as civil rights. But neither of these facts is anything unique in the history of American politics. Many elections have been won with ordinary men, and sharp intraparty disagreements are the inevitable concomitant of our two-party system. In other words, the outlook for the Democratic Party was by no means hopeless until a vast number of supposedly loyal Democrats did their best to make it so.

When the going gets rough a cohesive party closes up ranks, compromises differences in the interest of a working program, and broadens the base of its leadership to make up for any loss of a dominant individual leader. Has the Democratic Party been in power so long that it has forgotten these elementary facts taught by adversity? The revolt of the Wallaceites should have been fair warning that all the party's reserves of strength would be needed to make a creditable showing in 1948. Yet other factional leaders have allowed their separate preferences and prejudices such unrestrained scope as to bring the great quadrennial conclave to the brink of despair.

With the final collapse of the Eisenhower bubble, many of the rebels are in a chastened mood. Apparently most of them are resigned to the inevitable nomination of Mr. Truman, but they will find it difficult to support with any enthusiasm a candidate whom they have worked so hard to displace. The grave mistake they have made, in our opinion, is in assuming that a party must find a glittering name to adorn its ticket or go down to defeat. Some of our most successful Presidents have been elected, not because they were great heroes or scintillating personalities, but because they represented sound and progressive policies and a party capable of carrying those policies into effect. If that historic fact has been forgotten, or if the convention should fail to rally the dissidents to a new sense of party responsibility, the bankruptcy within will indeed have reached serious proportions.

Charter Revision

The growing sentiment in favor of revision of the United Nations Charter is impressively underlined by the 19-to-7 vote of the Little Assembly recommending that the General Assembly consider whether the time has come to call a revision conference. Among the seven opposing votes were those of the United States, Great Britain and France. China abstained. Soviet Russia is not represented in the Little Assembly. It was clearly a victory for the small powers led in this instance by Dr. Jose Arce, chief delegate of the Argentine.

Opposition to the resolution urging a revision conference is more concerned with strategy than ultimate purpose. There is almost universal disgust with the manner in which the Russians have employed the veto to hamstring the U. N. Something must obviously be done to rescue the U. N. from the blight that unrestrained use of the Security Council veto has put upon it. But it does not follow that an immediate conference on revision under Article 109 of the Charter is the proper answer. On each proposed move of this sort the question must be asked whether it would strengthen or weaken collective action in the democratic world for the maintenance of peace.

Joseph E. Johnson, United States representative, fears that the resolution will weaken the more specific work of the Little Assembly to dilute the big-power veto. That body also approved and sent to the General Assembly a report recommending that use of the veto be limited. Remote as it may be, the chance of securing an agreement along these lines is better than the chance of securing a proper revision of the Charter at this time.

Two thirds of the members of the General Assembly could order a general conference for revision of the Charter with the concurrence of any seven members of the Security Council. The catch comes in ratifying the work of such a conference. Its proposals would become effective only if approved by a two-thirds vote of the conference and ratified by two thirds of the members of the U. N., including all the Big Five. In other words, Russia could block such a revision as easily as she may veto any proposal before the Security Council. That fact tends to reduce the present revision movement to the status of an elaborate gesture. Certainly no revision conference should be permitted to interfere with the more immediate and practical steps that can be taken within the present Charter to tighten the bonds of mutual interest and common defense among the western democracies.

Labor Foreign Service

The country has been fortunate in that the representatives of organized labor called upon to participate in international endeavors often have been persons of superior caliber and insight. It is apparent that the services of intelligent labor spokesmen will be required on a larger scale in such undertakings as the European Recovery Program. Accordingly, the suggestion of an unofficial Labor Foreign Service, broached by the National Planning Association, strikes us as sensible. In a report, "American Labor's Role in the European Recovery Program," the association urges major labor organizations to establish such a reserve of persons especially qualified for international service. Small numbers of such persons given special training while continuing their regular duties thus could constitute a pool of talent on which the Government could draw for important temporary assignments.

Labor has a vital interest in putting its best foot forward when its members are selected to represent the American viewpoint abroad. Such representatives should be solidly grounded not only in the philosophy of the labor movement, but also in the considerations of American international policy. As the National Planning Association report observes with respect to labor participation in ECA:

> It is important that they have direct contacts and continuing associations with the non-Communist popular movements in the cooperating countries and that they participate on a basis of congenial equality with representatives of other economic groups at sufficiently high policy-making levels in order that their viewpoints will be duly considered . . . Those labor representatives who are chosen to participate in ECA should have a mature, balanced outlook sympathetic to the American interest in the program. They should have important roots in American labor, and they should keep them. They should have an opportunity to obtain the necessary background of understanding for intelligent participation in international affairs and to continue as special representatives in this field.

Tamm Inquiry

Whether or not the District Bar Association finds any valid legal issue in the interim appointment of Edward Allen Tamm to be associate justice of the Federal District Court here, the investigation which its directors have ordered will have the effect of again centering attention on an unwise appointment. Mr. Tamm had previously been nominated for this judgeship while Congress was in session. The Senate conducted hearings for several weeks on the nomination but failed to confirm it, presumably because of the opposition of the bar and the Federation of Citizens Associations. There is not much reason to suppose that the Senate will be any more favorably disposed toward the appointment next year than it was in the last session, and if that is the case Mr. Tamm will have to leave this lifetime position almost before getting his chair warm.

The opposition to Mr. Tamm relates solely to his lack of experience in the courtroom. As former assistant director of the FBI, he undoubtedly acquired one type of experience that would be valuable to a judge, and his character and general capacity appear to be beyond reproach. Lack of courtroom experience, however, is a severe handicap to any one who undertakes to preside over a court. It is unfortunate that President Truman did not recognize this and choose an eminent lawyer whose qualifications would be wholly above question.

Ford Union Shop

The NLRB poll of Ford employes to determine whether they wanted a union-shop clause in their contract with the management is the largest election of its kind to date. The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the union shop, with nearly 90 per cent of all employes eligible to vote registering their approval. This vote follows the usual pattern. For in all but a negligible percentage of the polls, the voters have approved the union shop by large majorities.

This latest election is just one more argument, if any were needed, in favor of repeal of the union-shop clause of the Taft-Hartley Act. Legislation providing for such repeal was urged on Congress at the last session by both Chairman Herzog and General Counsel Denham of the NLRB but failed of passage. Had Congress acted on this proposal, the owners of the captive coal mines would not have refused to sign a UMW contract that they consider illegal because of the inclusion of a union-shop clause without a prior election. Nor would their mines be strikebound. Nor would John L. Lewis have been charged with unfair labor practices and ordered to appear before Justice Goldsborough again this week as a result of those charges.

It is too late to repair the damage done by congressional inaction in this case, but the next Congress should lose no time relieving the NLRB of the burdensome and futile task of conducting union-shop polls, so that the agency can get ahead with more important work that requires attention.

By J. M. Lalley

The Saint Corrupted

THE HEART OF THE MATTER, by Graham Greene. (Viking Press, $3.)

Here we have what seems to be Mr. Graham Green's most ambitious effort as a psychological novelist, and the success of this American edition seems pretty well assured by the apparently unanimous praise given to the book by its English reviewers. It does indeed exhibit Mr. Greene's wonderful technical powers, such as his recreation of atmosphere, his manipulation of dialogue and reverie and his quietly accelerating tempo of narration. In these particulars, it seems to me, Mr. Greene has no betters among living writers of fiction and not many among the dead. But I think it also just to say that the shortcomings that were only barely perceptible in his earlier novels become very evident here and that because of them Mr. Greene, with all his virtuosity, is still a good distance from Dostoievski or even from Mauriac.

Mr. Greene is dealing in grand tragedy, indeed, under his own premises, the greatest of all possible tragedies; it is the story of a fall from grace and of death without hope of salvation. It is the proof of his skill that the poignancy of the tragedy is felt by believing and unbelieving readers alike; yet so many spiritual problems raised by the story are left unresolved that the end effect upon the emotions is one of confusion rather than release. The protagonist, Major Scobie, is a police official in a thoroughly sinister coastal town somewhere in British West Africa, an outwardly dull and plodding man but efficient and conscientious and immune to the malignant boredom which, with the climate, is slowly corrupting the character of almost everyone else in the colony. Yet, partly because of mendacious gossip and partly because of his disagreeable and unpopular wife, Scobie has been passed over for promotion. He is only mildly disappointed, but Mrs. Scobie is deeply chagrined. Scobie has long since ceased to love his wife, as the word is commonly understood, but out of compassion he conceals it from her as best he can. Compassion indeed is the key to Scobie's character and the agent of his downfall. It prompts him to read and destroy a letter seized in the course of an official search instead of turning it over unopened to the military intelligence as the wartime regulations demanded. It prompts him to encourage his wife's flirtation with a young newcomer, Wilson, who appears on the records as an accountant, but is actually an agent of the intelligence. Compassion also persuades Major Scobie to place himself in the debt and in the power of a Syrian smuggler, Yusef, in order to finance a holiday in South Africa for Mrs. Scobie. Mr. Greene, throughout, seems to be laboring the irony that compassion, though the paramount virtue, is not from an official point of view a desirable trait in policemen, and that from a spiritual point of view it may be a dangerous trait in a Christian.

Both the Scobies are devout Catholics, although the quality and direction of the devotion seem to differ greatly in each case. Anyway, the fact of their religion becomes of immense importance to the story when, in the course of his wife's absence, Scobie, a man of 50 or thereabouts, finds himself suddenly enmeshed in a love affair with a girl of 19. This girl, Helen Roult, is one of a group of survivors from a torpedoed ship landed on the coast after a long and harrowing voyage in an open boat. Once again compassion has been Scobie's undoing, and this time it is in his own eyes final. Presently Mrs. Scobie returns, and full of zeal for her husband's ghostly welfare insists that he accompany her to church and to the sacrament. Scobie confesses his adultery, but his refused absolution when he refuses to promise that he will never again see the girl alone. Nevertheless, to spare his wife the anguish of the truth, he receives the Eucharist and at the moment of sacrilege offers his own damnation as a sacrifice. But Scobie's total degradation is not yet accomplished. He betrays his office by becoming an accomplice to one of Yusef's smuggling operations and later becomes an accessory to the murder of his faithful houseboy, Ali. Meanwhile, his guilty associations are being slowly ferreted out by the military spy, Wilson, whose professional instincts have been sharpened by malice. As the net closes around him, Scobie kills himself under elaborately contrived circumstances that he hopes will give the appearance of natural death.

The moral at which Mr. Greene appears to be driving is that it is only a hair's line at best that distinguishes the great sinner from the authentic saint. Thus the character of Major Scobie is in some respects an enlargement of that of the whisky-priest in The Power and the Glory. The characterization is, however, artistically defective; for example, Scobie, who, as I said, is represented as a stolid and prosaic fellow, nevertheless thinks and behaves in a way that seems possible only in a sensitive and somewhat impulsive man. It is perhaps because—in contrast to the admirably drawn minor characters—Scobie is never quite real, that it is difficult to envisage him, as Mr. Greene evidently wishes us to do, as the victim of his own great goodness. He seems at times rather the victim of a demoralizing environment, of an ill-chosen vocation and of a selfish wife, who nevertheless remains throughout technically in the way of grace. Theologically no doubt, Mr. Greene is on firm ground, since we are told that even in sin one is seeking God. However, it is not with an essay of theology, but with a work of art that we have to do.

"Faith In Freedom"

Since your July 5 editorial, "Faith In Freedom," mentioned me specifically and referred to the charges I had presented to the County Commissioners against present policies and practices found in Montgomery County public schools, I feel justified in submitting a brief statement at this time.

Regardless of what Mr. Douglass, assistant superintendent, may say in defense of teaching communism in Montgomery County schools, and regardless of how admirable The Washington Post editorial staff may consider such a practice, it is undeniably true that nowhere, in no textbook or publication used in public schools of said county will you find any comment or statement describing communism in its true status.

The National Education Association's series called "Building America" shows despicable communism in Russia as a glorious thing; the American Observer and The Scholastic magazines do not in any way depict communism as the rotten and reprehensible way of life that it is. Instead, most leading educators consider communism and its close relative socialism as fine forms of what they call "democracy."

Miss C. Mabel Smith, in charge of curriculum for the county, is coauthor with Columbia University's Bruner of a socialist studies book used in the county entitled Bruner-Smith Social Studies. Book III of this series contains a very definite and concise six-point program for socialism—which is what public school children are being taught in Montgomery County.

The truth about sordid communism is not taught, whereas county administrators are evidently quite willing that children of Montgomery County learn facts, however misleading, that show despicable communism in a favorable light.

FRANKLIN T. MILES.

Chevy Chase.

Editor's Note: Neither Mr. Douglass nor The Washington Post, of course, condoned the teaching of communism. The point of Mr. Douglass' statement and our editorial was that the faith of students in the American way of life is not so fragile that it will be shattered by descriptions of other systems.

Each For All

Our committee is in the process of forming groups of persons united around certain points of view, the central one of which is brought out below:

1. We agree with the commonly expressed view that the present state of man's affairs cannot be much helped except by extraordinary action of a moral kind.

2. Having recognized that the world's problem is a moral one, we began to look for the highest determinable moral ideal, around which we could rally. We saw what should not be hard to see—that most of the world's evil is man-made, made by "groupism."

3. The answer to this deadly groupism, and to the essential problem of evil itself, is plain. It is a cooperative union of mankind. It is the literal practice of a policy of "each for all and all for each," embracing without favor every human being. This principle of "each for all and all for each" we believe to be the highest presently determinable moral ideal. Less than this no longer is deserving of the name of a great and challenging morality.

4. While it is commonly agreed that a truly cooperative community of mankind is a consummation devoutly to be wished, the usual comment is: "Yes, but other people will not do it; they are far to selfish." Our reply is: "Then we must begin it, at whatever cost, for there positively is no other way of bringing decency to the human scene." Once the way is broken, others will follow, and at last all mankind.

Let all who accept the supreme ideal of "each for all and all for each," despite all other differences whatsoever, so declare themselves, within their own circles and in recurring letters to the magazines and newspapers.

Working Wives

I refer to letter "Working Wives," by "Distaff Spinner," published July 8. Yes, American women are more career conscious than British women. They have opportunities outside the home which British women lack.

And the labor-saving appliances which are regarded by the British as luxuries here would be used by the British if they could acquire them. Given time and opportunity they will be just like these American women. Living there for 23 years and here for 25, I know.

ANOTHER BRITISHER.

Pride At Berlin

Mr. Sumner Welles writes well and is, generally, a sound man. But in his column of July 5, he wrote something which baffles and depresses me immensely. Referring to the "crisis" in Berlin, he concludes "the United States cannot afford to retreat from the advanced position where her own faulty diplomacy has placed her."

It seems to me that if I should find that I am out on a limb because of my own mistakes, the only sensible, honest and honorable thing to do would be to try to get out from the "advanced" and admitted wrong position and correct my mistake. This is what any sensible, sane person in private life would do, especially when the alternative of persisting in the error because of false pride, would mean, or might mean, universal disaster. Moreover, there are ways and means by which we could change our untenable position and save our pride, I think, if we are smart and sit down at the conference table as soon as possible.

Serving the supreme interest of our people—peace—is the most fundamental and honorable action we may perform. We should be only ashamed to do those things which can terribly harm our people and the rest of mankind. False pride has ruined many individuals and many nations. I am surprised that Sumner Welles can't see it, with all his intelligence, and experience in world affairs. Your editorial "Futility in Berlin" of June 27 was excellent.

HOUSEWIFE.

Vienna, Va.

"Superseniority"

It is time that both the veterans and nonveterans realized that neither won the last war. The conflict was a joint venture, and doomed to dismal failure without the equal cooperation of both. It was not a matter of the military of the United States versus the military of the Axis; it was a case of the people of the United States versus the people of the Axis, veterans included.

Your editorial of June 30, "Superseniority," and the subsequent comments made by Americus and Clinton J. Parker (July 4 and 5), have been read with some interest. It is obvious that these two gentlemen have given very little consideration to the problem other than to ascertain that superseniority operates favorably to them, including the handicaps. The American tradition of fair play, and the rightful recognition of the services and sacrifices of others, are totally missing from their statements. Both the hardships they claim the veteran experienced, as well as the soft-living they omitted, applies equally to the nonveterans.

Many programs are well under way which give preference and special assistance to veterans in preparing them for every success; therefore, on the whole, they have been placed on an equal or better footing with others in qualifying themselves for jobs. Anything beyond this point, and consideration for appointment on any other than a merit basis, is a coddling of a special group and, of all things, of that strong, "he-man" group which by its very composition should be self-reliant.

The indispensible parts played by both veterans and nonveterans, honestly recognized by many such outstanding leaders as Eisenhower, Roosevelt, Marshall, etc., should be rewarded by job opportunities to both for a way of life on an equal basis. Special benefits should be given equally to both in job preference where their war duties resulted in disabilities; no job preference in original appointment should be given to either if disabilities did not occur.

Loyalty is the faithful serving of one's country to the best of his ability. The draft boards determined where men and women would serve best. I daresay it will be very awkward when a veteran's son comes to him some day and says, "Dad, there is no war on but I am willing to die for my country. Why am I not as loyal as you?" "Superseniority" slaps the faces of those youngsters coming out of high school who were too young to fight in the last war, even if qualified otherwise.

Only a very small percentage of the veterans saw combat action. This is not their fault and they should not be penalized for it. However, neither should the nonveterans who served their country just as loyally.

D. M. FREDERICK.

Arlington.

I have just read the letter of Clinton J. Parker and it seems about time that some one questioned this almost constant gripe of some veterans.

Has Mr. Parker ever stopped to consider the reasons why the glorious victories of our veterans were possible? And has he ever stopped to consider the utter selfishness of some veterans as demonstrated in his letter?

The undersigned would be the last in the world to take anything away from any deserving veteran, but how about the thousands and possibly millions of men and women who also left their homes and lived under unpleasant and uncomfortable circumstances just as long as the veterans did in order to supply the veterans with the necessary guns, ammunition, torpedoes, mines, rockets, radio, radar, telephones, wire, jeeps, peeps, airplanes and a countless number of other items which made the success of the veteran possible? Do you hear any gripes from them?

Incidentally, many many of those people have been replaced by veterans. Are they deserving of any consideration whatever when it comes to jobs or should the veterans have all the preference there is?

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Politics Of The Two Parties

LIPPMANN

AT NO TIME has there been anyone, except General Eisenhower, on whom the Democrats could have united in place of Mr. Truman. That was in part, but not only, because with Eisenhower they would have had so good a chance of winning. It was also because Eisenhower was the only man with whom the main factions, the Southerners, the New Dealers, and the big city bosses, really wanted to win. He was uncommitted on all of the issues that divide them. His views were known only on the broad general purposes, such as peace without appeasement, national defense without militarism or war, which unite them. They could all have been for Eisenhower in the happy hope, almost certainly the illusion, that on the disagreeable issues about which they disagree he would be with them, or at least not strongly against them.

There was no one else available who looked like a probable winner; even more significantly, there was no one else with whom they all wanted to win. Justice Douglas would have been popular with the New Dealers but, because he has even more thorough-going advanced convictions on Negro rights and on social questions than Mr. Truman, not with the Southerners. To have united on him would not have meant victory in the election. But it would have meant the recapture of the Democratic national party organization by the New Dealers. Senator Byrd, or some one of his school, would have brought absolute and complete defeat in the North, and at the same time a violent disruption of the party.

ALL THIS suggests, it seems to me, that the Democratic Party cannot now be reunited except as an opposition party. Out of office, relieved of the responsibility of having a President and an Administration which has to act on the many issues about which they disagree, the Democrats can once again become reunited. The heat and urgency will go out of their disputes when they do not have to decide them at the White House, when they can deal with issues locally, and need only talk about them as members of a minority in Congress.

Though Mr. Truman will not, of course, allow himself to believe it, and though none of the practical politicians can, under the rules of the game admit it, the main purpose of the Democrats this year is to prepare themselves to become the effective opposition. That is extremely important business, which can be done all the better if the party leaders and bosses make it their real purpose in the campaign and contrive to make the voters understand it. They will get more votes, I should think, for their Governors, Senators and Representatives, if it is tacitly admitted that they are the opposition party. For there must be a considerable number of independent voters and of disaffected Democrats who will prefer Dewey and Warren to the prospects of Truman for another four years. They will not wish to take the risk of prolonging the Truman Administration. But they might well—in view of the Republican record in the House—vote Democratic at home in order to make sure that there is a strong opposition to Martin and Taber and Allen and Halleck.

LAST WEEK Elmo Roper made an estimate, on the basis of his own polls, that at least 18 per cent of the electorate today call themselves independents and do not want to be regarded as belonging to any party. The exact figure is not important, and its accuracy does not matter. It is certainly true that the independent nonparty voters hold the balance of power and can, if most of them swing one way rather than the other, decide the outcome of the election. It must also be true, as Roper pointed out, that there are in the country today, and have been ever since the Roosevelt era, substantially more Democrats than Republicans.

The weakness of Truman is that he tends to repel Democrats, driving some to Wallace, some to the Republicans, some to stay at home, and that he does not attract the independents. The problem of Dewey, since the regular Republicans are nothing like a majority, is to make it possible and reasonably attractive for most of the independents and some at least of the disaffected Democrats to support him.

UNLESS there is an international catastrophe the character of the election will almost certainly be shaped by the fact that the Democrats have been in office 16 years and the Republicans out of office. During these 16 years the Democrats have made lots of Democrats, especially among the younger voters. But, as usually happens to a party which is too long in office, their leaders have died, retired, or grown fat and complacent. They have not produced new leaders, and the party today, though it wanted someone else than Truman, had no one available.

The Republicans, on the other hand, have not recruited many new Republicans while they were out of office. But they have developed new leaders, men like Dewey, Warren, Stassen, Dulles, Ives, Saltonstall, Lodge, Baldwin, Bradford, who are manifestly a new generation, quite as much so as the Roosevelt Democrats of 1932, in American politics. If now they take control of the Government, they will have the opportunity to win, what the Republicans do not now have, a plurality over the Democrats among the rank and file of the voters.

Third Wage Boost in Offing For 170,000 at U. S. Steel

Pittsburgh, July 11 (AP).—The giant U. S. Steel Corp. is expected to announce this week a wage increase for 170,000 CIO-United Steelworker members in its five subsidiaries.

A highly-placed spokesman for the corporation, who declined use of his name, said:

"The corporation is under no obligation to increase wages but feels that in view of a continuing climb in the cost of living the worker should be protected."

The steel workers are working under the second year of a two-year contract. By terms of the agreement, wage negotiations were reopened in April but the company then turned down a CIO request for a pay boost. The union accepted the company decision and agreed to abide by the contract's no-strike pledge.

The spokesman said Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, had been meeting with Steelworker President Philip Murray in an effort to reach an understanding on the increase. Murray declined to comment on the matter.

U. S. Steel, which set the pattern in the last two postwar increases, earlier refused to grant a "third round" pay boost on the ground that it sought to halt an upward inflation swing.

Since then major companies which first followed the "Big Steel" policy have changed their stand and granted raises. These include Westinghouse Electric Corp., Westinghouse Air Brake, General Motors, Aluminum Company of America and others.

Weirton Steel Corp. announced last weekend that it would set a wage increase "within 10 days."

Price Rise Seen Result Of Base Point Discard

Cleveland, July 11 (AP).—Even "the man in the street" will feel the effects of United States Steel Corporation's move to abandon the basing point price system, said the magazine Steel today.

The move by the Nation's largest steel producer was expected to set the pattern for the industrty, "although in a few instances mills already have substituted" an f. o. b. mill basis, it continued.

Other idustries which have basing point price systems may find it necessary to follow steel's example, the magazine reported.

"Although United States Steel did not indicate what prices would be under the new method there has been considerable conjecture it will be accompanied with price advances to cover higher operating costs, includig an anticipated wage increase to steelworkers," Steel said.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Straw In The Flood

PHILADELPHIA—The President has clutched at Justice William O. Douglas, in the best manner of a drowning man reaching for a straw in the whirling flood. On Saturday he telephoned Douglas, who is on vacation in his native Northwest, and offered him second place on the Democratic ticket.

Douglas asked for and was granted 48 hours to make up his mind. Today, when his friend, Leon Henderson, one of the leaders of Americans for Democratic Action, called him in Oregon, the two men agreed that ADA ought not to place Douglas in nomination for the Presidency, in competition with Truman. Henderson then asked Douglas whether he would accept the vice presidential nomination. Douglas replied that he probably would not, but his decision had not been reached. As these words are written, this is the current position. The outcome may be known before they are printed.

MEANWHILE, there are several points of very great interest to note in connection with this sequence of events. In the first place, word of the President's choice had hardly reached the convention insiders, before the impulse to rebel asserted itself. The Southern insurrectionists mustered to fight Douglas hard on the convention floor if necessary. Certain other State delegations prepared to join them. It began to look as though the President's selection might conceivably be ignored.

The truth is that this sullen, squalid, depressing convention has only one conspicuous, uniting feeling—resentment against the President. The different factions—the Northern organizations, the liberal and labor groups, and the Southern oligarchs—disagree on every other possible point, and would like to cut each other's throats. But name of the unhappy Truman needs only to be mentioned, to bring forth a loud, unanimous anthem of condemnation. And since the delegates have failed to vent their resentment upon the President personally, a good number of them would probably enjoy expressing their sentiments by throwing his vice presidential candidate into the discard.

It is unfair to the President that this should be so.

He has simply proved too small a man to hold together the discordant elements in the Democratic Party. Being a small man, he has also given offense by isolating himself among his secretary Snyders and Major General Vaughan, and refusing to consult the party chieftains. He has not been wicked; he has only been weak.

BUT THIS is a convention of postmasters and collectors of internal revenue and leaders of postmasters and collectors of internal revenue. After 16 fat years, they can smell the lean years ahead. They can almost hear the loud "zip" of the Republican ripper bills, which will slice off the payroll even those covered into civil service. Their livelihood depends upon the political success of their party. They blame Truman for its failure, and that is why they hate him.

A good many of the leaders even believe Truman will be unwise to come here to accept the nomination. They predict he will be greeted with a positive tornado of unenthusiasm. The humiliating word has been passed to the White House. But the President has given his little bob of the head and forced smile of a boxer receiving a hard blow, and has answered that he was not a quitter, just as he answered party leader after party leader who warned him that he ought not to run.

While the immediate response to Truman's selection of Douglas tells much about the Democratic Party, the selection tells a good deal about the state of affairs inside the White House. The struggle with Congress would have been terrible and bloody, but Truman would certainly not be where he is today, if he had played the role of a fighting New Dealer in the Roosevelt tradition. At least he would thus have had some following somewhere. Instead, he employed the curious tactic of sending to Congress from time to time messages as long as telephone books, indorsing every one of Roosevelt's objectives, and then doing nothing much further.

THE MESSAGES were commonly the result of the advice of the Northern Democratic leaders, combining with such personal advisers as Clark Gifford. The subsequent inaction resulted from the influence of the Snyders, Vaughans and John Steelmans. Truman is now utterly cut off from the Northern Democratic chieftains, not one of whom he has consulted during this convention. But Clifford is still very much at his elbow. Douglas is the most eminent and effective of the vanishing race of New Dealers. And the fact that Douglas has been the President's first choice for the Vice Presidency implies that the Clifford viewpoint is predominating in the President's campaign strategy.

This means, in turn, that the campaign will be keyed to the connection between the Republican Party and the hungry special interests, who were not invisible on the previous, more jolly chowder march here in Philadelphia. Indeed, if the wretched Democratic National Committee can find the cash to pay for his campaign trains, it seems likely that the country will be hearing about malefactors of great wealth from every whistle-stop—for the Truman strategy is also to go to the people.

5000 Huks Hail Quirino At Ceremony

Bahay Pare, Philippines, July 11 (AP). — President Elpidio Quirino came to this remote village in the heart of central Luzon's rice paddies today to receive a token surrender of arms from the Hukbalahap peasant guerillas, but he did not get it.

Instead Hukbalahap Leader Luis Taruc asked him to assure the crowd of 5000 that the recent amnesty was complete and unconditional, and that a program of land and governmental reforms would be accomplished.

Standing on the porch of the rickety village schoolhouse, the President told the crowd: "I am in your hands now. You can even kill me if you want to. I am very sure you will not, for if you do you will lose the greatest advocate of the cause of the masses in this country."

When this was translated from English into Tagalog, the throng cheered, and Taruc exclaimed, "Together we stand behind our President."

Mateo del Castillo, leader of the National Peasants' Union, sent his daughter, who said he intended to stay in the hills until certain that the government was making land reforms.

After two years of intermittent and bloody warfare, however, the atmosphere was cordial.

Col. Alberto Ramos, constabulary officer, said the Huks had promised to help eliminate banditry, and only today had brought in three suspected cattle thieves.

Group to Study Petroleum Needs For an Emergency

Plans for meeting petroleum needs in a national emergency will be recommended by a committee announced yesterday.

The group will report to the National Petroleum Council. A council statement said it was asked by Director Max W. Ball of the Interior Department oil and gas division to survey wartime experience and propose a program.

Ball wrote the council that the Government and the petroleum industry should be prepared to reinstate measures needed to assure essential supplies in time of emergency "and to provide the best possible Government and industry set-up to function at such time."

He asked the council to recommend "such Government, Government-industry and industry organizations, procedures and policies" as it believes needed to meet an emergency.

VA Allows Claims For 8 New Diseases

The Veterans Administration has added eight tropical diseases to its list of those ailments which war veterans may be assumed to have caught in active service.

Those added, at instruction of Congress, are loiasis, blackwater fever as a complication of malaria, onchicerciasis, oroya fever, dracontiasis, pinta, plague and yellow fever. Already on the list were, leprosy, dysentery, filiarisis, leischmaniasis, malaria and schistosomiasis.

Physicians said most of the ailments are acute and the likelihood of many war veterans qualifying for compensation because of them at this late date, is fairly remote.

Pravda Hits U. S., Canada Officials

Moscow, July 11 (AP).—Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, today attacked a group of United States and Canadian officials for "arms brandishing."

Those attacked were Gen. Carl Spaatz, former chief of staff of the United States Air Force; Gen. Omar N. Bradley, United States Army chief of staff; Undersecretary of Army William H. Draper, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan, Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royal, Canadian External Affairs Minister Louis S. St. Laurent, and Canadian Defense Minister Brooke Claxton.

Pravda asserted the American and Canadian leaders are atempting to create a "war psychosis" which "evidently is needed by certain persons for their selfish purposes."

'Instances' Cited

The article said the United States State Department will have "to bear full responsibility for the unbridled campaign of war propaganda" being conducted by the United States.

Reviewing the United States reply rejecting a Soviet protest against "war propaganda" in magazine Newsweek, the article cited other instances of "war instigation" in the United States.

Pravda referred to an article in Look magazine which it said was entitled "Air Forces Plan Bombardment of Russia," and another in Life by General Spaatz calling the Soviet Union "the potential enemy of the United States."

(General Spaatz said in his article, published July 5, that "it must be plain to every thinking person that the only nation in the world with the military potential to challenge the United States in the foreseeable future is the USSR.")

The Pravda article said General Bradley had called for "holding bases from which we can attack Russia." It asserted that Undersecretary Draper in a San Francisco address had called for "armed forces necessary to seize and hold bases far beyond United States boundaries."

Secretary Sullivan was attacked for "calling down thunder and lightning" on countries in eastern Europe. Secretary Royall was similarly criticized.

Canadian Ministers St. Laurent and Claxton were attacked as "the servants of Wall Street in Canada."

cow apartment houses. The apartments require a high government priority. There was no indication that McMillin has a job.

Some sources here believed Russia's refusal to grant the interview may have been motivated by fear that it could be used by the United States Government to refute Soviet propaganda about McMillin.

For one thing, they said, it might disclose whether McMillin actually wrote the letter handed the embassy and broadcast by Moscow radio as the "explanation" of McMillin's alleged defection. The letter praised Russia, damned the United States, and did not mention Mrs. Biconish.

Here are the "official" United States and Russian positions at the moment:

The United States—it is an "obvious" case of seduction and exploitation of a young inexperienced American in a strategic spot. McMillin was infatuated with Mrs. Biconish and could not stand the thought of returning home without her.

Russia—McMillin decided not to return to the United States because of its "anti-Soviet" psychology. He believed the Russian system is superior to the American political system because in Russia "everything belongs to the people" but United States industry and resources "are in the hands of one group."

Coal Shortage Acute In Wintry Australia

Sydney, Australia, July 11 (AP).—An acute coal shortage today caused city authorities at Sydney and Adelaide to stop all tram and bus travel.

Emergency buses were organized in both cities to handle the usual load, and it is expected normal service will resume Monday.

Residents of Sydney and Melbourne shivered in one of their coldest winters. Gas and electricity were rationed, to be used only for cooking and at set hours.

Greeks Prepare New Assault

Athens, July 11 (AP).—The Greek army was believed today to be regrouping for a fresh assault on Communist rebels intrenched in the steep Grammos Mountains.

Only minor clashes were reported in the north Greece mountains where six divisions of the Greek army have been trying to hem in rebel chieftain Markos Vafiades and his insurgents since June 21. There was some activity northwest of Nestorion, where army troops dug the rebels from several fortified positions.

In central Macedonia some larger engagements were reported. The government said 37 rebels were killed and 12 captured at Fourna, and one guerilla band of 33 was smashed when 25 of its complement was killed at Mount Vermion.

At Kozane, second Greek army operational headquarters for the Grammos operation, guerilla artillery lobbed shells into Eptahorlo and Pentalofos yesterday.

Schuman Set to Meet Strikes With Pay Increases

Paris, July 11 (AP).—Premier Robert Schuman and his cabinet will spend Monday trying to buy off a strike with 30 billion francs.

This sum, the equivalent of 100 million dollars, is what Schuman proposes to spread in wage raises over 2000 different classifications of government employes who either are striking or are about to strike for more pay.

Schuman has asked leaders of the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGIL) and non-Communist workers to give him until Tuesday to work out the plan.

The new wage classifications will be carried by Paris newspapers, probably Monday afternoon. In some cases, it is understood, wage raises will be as much as 50 per cent.

Already 60,000 workers in the Finance Ministry have struck. All other government employes are threatening to strike and hamstring the country unless wages are raised. Labor unions contend prices have gone up 127 per cent during the last 18 months, while wages have increased but 64 per cent.

Dogs to Get Shots for Rabies

The Washington canine world is going to get its annual shot-in-the-arm during the next month.

The Health Department has announced it will open 12 antirabies clinics today, and keep them open until August 13 to permit vaccination of local dogs. The clinics will be open from 4 to 6 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays during the period.

Failure to have pets vaccinated before the August 13 deadline carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail or a $300 fine.

Dr. R. R. Ashworth, Health Department chief veterinarian, has cautioned owners to bring their dogs on leash to the clinics. Persons who use services of private veterinarians for the vaccination must obtain a certificate. The vaccinations will be performed by Health Department veterinarians and a number of private practitioners who have contracted to help with the work. Clinic locations are:

Electrical Nerve Aid in Polio

New York, July 11 (AP).—A new electrical nerve, that substitutes for paralyzed nerves in infantile paralysis, was shown here today at the First International Polio Conference.

The nerve is a generator of weak, alternating currents, numbering from two to six thousand a second.

The current replaces one or many lost nerves. It causes muscles to tense. They swell and relax, with the current, like the flexing of biceps.

This substitute nerve is used on muscles that are inert, flabby and often seemingly dead because they lack nerves to govern their motions.

It substitutes for mild exercise, which is at present one of the few treatments to restore, or partly restore, limbs wasted by infantile paralysis.

There is no effort by the patient. This is an advantage for children who do not comprehend how to use what little is left of weakened muscles so as to bring them back.

Dr. S. L. Osborne of Northwestern University Medical School, who has been experimenting with the nerve machine, said it is hoped to train nerves not ordinarily used to replace those lost to a muscle.

A new chemical that increases resistance to infantile paralysis in mice was exhibited by the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

The drug is oxythiamin, a combination of Vitamin B and nitrus acid. It causes almost immediate deficiency of Vitamin B in the body and the deficiency is the apparent cause of the good effects. The fact that Vitamin B deficiency retarded polio in mice was discovered before the war.

Oxythiamin reduced deaths of mice by about 50 per cent. It also has shown both a preventive tendency and apparent value also when taken after the disease began.

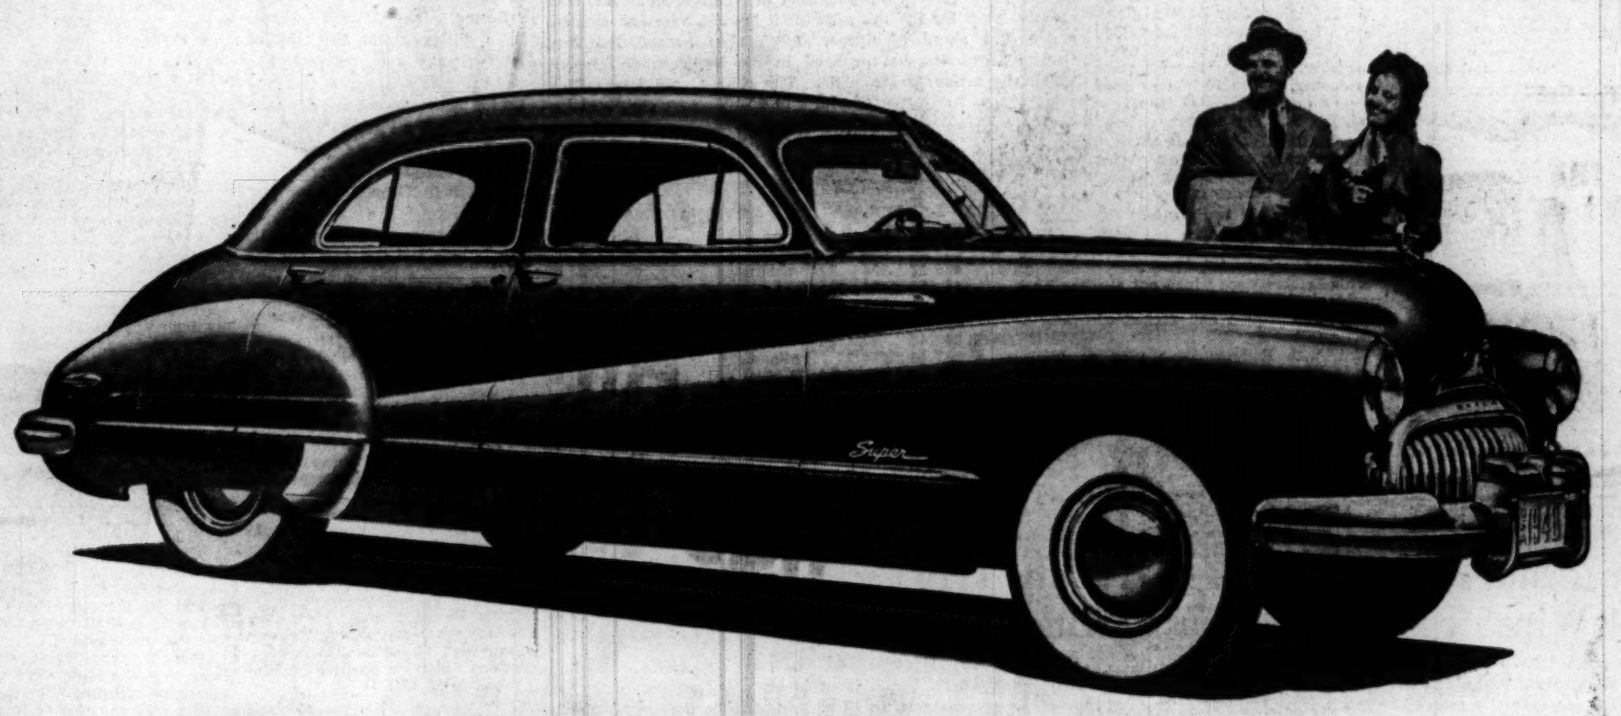
WTOP Wins Trophy For Public Service

Radio station WTOP yesterday was awarded a trophy for "outstanding public service" during the fifteenth anniversary broadcast of the "Labor News Review with Albert Dennis."

The award was made by a standing testimonial committee representing 175 local labor organizations. It was accepted by Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public service, education and public relations.



TWO HEADLINERS are better than one!

No doubt about it—the tires on your car have a lot to do with its comfort, and the new oversize casings deserve all the headline play they're getting.

But if you like to take things easy as you drive, why be content with one such headliner, when Buick gives you riding comfort in a double dose?

For instance, every 1948 Buick rides on lower-than-usual air pressures. That comes not only from the tire sizes, but from the fact that Buick wheels have the widest rims in the industry.

Wider rims increase tire air capacity. They also straighten sidewalls, giving them a bracing action against side thrust and sway.

Result: Comfort plus control — a soft ride and surer handling — in every Buick in our '48 line.

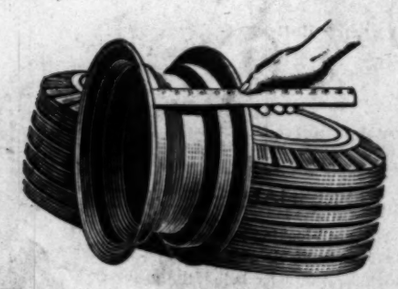
On top of that, every Buick has a soft coil spring on each wheel to back up the cushioning action of the tires.

Each wheel is prepared to step over bumps as they come, front and rear springs are precisely balanced with each other, and both front- and rear-seat passengers enjoy a level, jounce-free ride.

On such springing alone this sprightly fashion plate of '48 would be noted for its easy-going stride.

But we figure that two headline features are always better than one, so every Buick enjoys both gentler springing and lower-pressure tires.

Go try out a Buick and see for yourself what we mean. If you haven't done so already, you'll see your Buick dealer pronto, with or without a car to trade — and get a firm order in.



The Widest Rims in the Industry

Compare Buick rims with those on other cars of the same size and weight, and you'll find that Buick's are wider — why? Because wider rims increase air space and permit lower air pressures. They also give sidewalls an extra bracing action that checks sideway. The result is a softer ride, plus better car control.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

Nats' Two Big Innings Whip Yanks, 9-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ONCE UPON A TIME there was a nice guy named Bob Feller, and then he incorporated and started making $80,000 a year and bought a young yacht and an airplane and put a lot of money in the bank and got awful uppity.

POVICH

His stock in trade was the best fast ball since Walter Johnson or, anyway, since Lefty Grove, and all the people wanted to see him pitch and he got into the high chips. He pitched two no-hitters and 10 one-hitters and his wages zoomed above the salary of the President of the United States.

He authored books and held autographing parties and mopped up on royalties from a worshipful fandom, and endorsed popsicles at a hefty fee, and at the end of the season he went barnstorming and banked a lot more dough.

His has been the greatest financial success story in baseball, not excluding Babe Ruth's, and a couple of years ago the Robert Feller enterprises were coordinated under the firm name of Ro-Fel, Inc., and you had the personification of businessman ball player.

THERE WAS NOTHING wrong about that and in fact it was a shining example of free enterprise to fling in the teeth of Uncle Joe's commies. Feller was demonstrating that Amrican basball fans were a soft touch for anybody who could pitch like he did, and then, the other day he had a lapse of memory.

He forgot this country's fans were paying the freight and that their buck twenties had bought him that boat and that plane and piled his bank deposits high. He took a powder, and said he wouldn't pitch in tomorrow's All-Star game at St. Louis.

That's the fans' game. It's the day when they've supposed to have a voice in he baseball business. They are permitted to pick the teams. With their votes, they write out, in effect, the lineups that are handed to the umpires at home plate. That's the day when the ball players do something, directly, for the fans.

But from Feller, they got the back of his hand. He said he was "withdrawing" because he was due to pitch for the Indians yesterday and wouldn't be ready to pitch tomorrow. Not three innings, even, or one. If there is any record that he said he was sorry, it hasn't come to light.

IT'S THE SECOND year in a row that Feller has ducked the All-Star game. Last July, he complained of a lame back. But this week he merely decided to take a walk. The fans who wanted to see him pitch got scant consideration. Better make that no consideration at all.

Feller had a special duty to pitch in the All-Star game, aside from his obligation to the fans who had made his success possible and wanted to see him pitch. The annual July game funnels much of the money into the players' pension fund out of which they can draw $100 a month if they have been in the big leagues 10 years. Unlike what might be Feller's view, that's big dough to some ball players at the end of their careers.

Other players selected for the All-Star teams have withdrawn, but they have had legitimate excuses—George Kell's sprained ankle, Marty Marion's injured back, Eddie Stanky's broken ankle—but Feller's only excuse is a lame attitude.

And the Cleveland club itself can't be absolved. It could have ordered Feller to show up in uniform and be ready to pitch, willy-nilly. His contract reads that way. The Indians haven't made any new friends, either, and they may have lost some old ones.

THROWING THE FASTEST BALL in the business and winning more than 20 games in each of six consecutive full seasons doesn't make a fellow a champion, apparently. In the bigger sense of the word, there are other factors that go to make a champion—like Joe DiMaggio, for example.

Unlike Feller, DiMaggio isn't in good health. He has two painfully aching feet. They were enough to keep him out of the starting lineup Saturday despite the fact the Yankees needed to win desperately. From favoring his right foot, his left knee is also swollen badly. He has a diet rash on both arms. Any exertion is torture for him. But he'll show at St. Louis tomorrow and play as long as they ask him to. DiMag was talking of Feller here yesterday, in typical abbreviation. "Nuts," he said.

For a couple of seasons now Feller has said "the only thrill left for me is to pitch in a World Series." But the fans who don't like his run-out on their game hope they also have a thrill coming—the thrill of seeing Feller get his ears pinned back.

Browns Beat Feller, 3 to 2; Lemon Hurls Shutout, 5-0

Cleveland, July 11 (AP).—Bob Lemon hurled his sixth shutout and thirteenth victory of the season today, holding the St. Louis Browns to three hits as the Cleveland Indians won the nightcap of a doubleheader 5 to 0 before 39,940 fans.

The Browns won the opener 3 to 2 as home runs by Duck Kokos and Les Moss accounted for all the St. Louis runs.

Bob Feller was the victim of the Browns, absorbing his tenth loss against nine wins. Cliff Fannin was the winner.

In the second game Cleveland scored all its runs in the fifth inning. After Dale Mitchell had doubled and Johnny Berardino walked, Hank Edwards' double drove in Mitchell and Lou Boudreau's single accounted for two more tallies. Joe Gordon's seventeenth homer of the season concluded the scoring.

The seventh-place Browns had to come from behind to win the opener. Mitchell and Edwards each hit home runs in the first inning and Feller held the visitors hitless until Chuck Stevens connected for a double in the sixth. Kokos' homer in the seventh, with one aboard, tied the score and Moss's ninth-inning circuit blow won the ball game.

An Exciting Moment for Tommy

HOMER INSIDE PARK—Tommy Byrne, New York Yankee pitcher, made the second hit of his major league career against the Nats in yesterday's game at Griffith Stadium. And it turned out to be a homer. Byrne's drive to left took a hop away from Tom McBride of the Nats, and rolled to the Yankee bullpen. Above, Byrne crosses the plate, hat in hand, as Al Evans, Nat catcher, waits for the throw-in. Phil Rizzuto, who had singled and scored ahead of Byrne, and Yankee Second Baseman George Stirnweiss, bat in hand in the background, intently watch the action at the plate. The Nats staged late rallies to win, 9 to 4

Griffs Score Four Runs in Both Seventh And Eighth

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Working for the Yankee dollar was a losing proposition yesterday because the Nats clubbed the New Yorkers with a 15-hit attack which produced a 9-4 victory.

Shackled by the left-handed slants of Tommy Byrne for six innings, the Nats broke out with four-run sprees in each of the next two frames. They disposed of Byrne and Frank Shea with four runs in the seventh and gave Joe Page and Randy Gumpert a similar going-over in the eighth.

It wasn't funny to the Yankees, who usually find the Nats soft pickings, but to 15,281 customers and the Nats themselves this about-face by the locals was quite a treat.

Eddie Yost and Al Kozar led Washington's 15-hit attack, each with a double and two singles, and Mark Christman and Mickey Vernon came through with blows that turned what appeared to be another Griff licking into a resounding triumph.

Christman, extending his batting streak to 10 games, singled in the tieing run in the seventh inning assault and Vernon drove in the fifth and what proved to be the winning run with a single in the same round.

Yost Starts It Off

Until that seventh inning outburst, the Nats were trailing, 4-1, and two of those Yankee runs stemmed from the bat of starting Pitcher Byrne. The fast-balling lefthander belted a Walter Masterson pitch for a two-run inside-the-park homer in the fifth inning to rub out a 1-0 Nat lead which Masterson's double and Tom McBride's single had effected Nats two innings earlier.

Byrne's circuit walloped started out as a single but the ball took a bad hop over Tom McBride's head and rolled to the fence along the left field foul line as Byrne trailed Phil Rizzuto around the bases.

Single Yankee runs came in the sixth and seventh, the last off Forrest Thompson who turned in a other good relief job to gain credit for the decision. his second. Thompson relieved Masterson at the start of the seventh.

Byrne, who was tagged for six hits, including three doubles in the first six innings, had enough stuff in those early innings to pitch himself out of repeated difficulty.

When Yost whacked out his third hit and Earl Wooten followed by drawing the sixth pass from Byrne to launch the seventh, he was yanked and Frank Shea shoved into the breach.

It turned out to be a good move, for the Nats, as Shea pitched three-hit ball in one-third of an inning. Ed Stewart greeted him with a single that brought in Yost. A McBride sacrifice moved both runners up and set the stage for Christman to score them with a single. That tied the game.

After Al Evans skied out, Al Kozar kept the issue alive with a single which chased Shea in favor of Page. Vernon singled into center, sending Christman across with the fourth run of the inning.

Stewart, McBride Hit Hard

Five more Nat hits, including a triple by Stewart and a double by McBride, produced four more Nat tallies in the eighth and also a fourth Yankee pitcher, Randy Gumpert, who finally stilled the rambunctious Nats.

IN SHORT — McBride saved Masterson from two serious situations when he hauled in Rizzuto's long fly in the third and backed up against the wall to spear Johnson's smash in the sixth . . . Until yesterday, the Yankees had been able to make only two runs in 21 innings against Masterson . . . Vernon was promoted from sixth to cleanup man yesterday, second cleanup man, that is. He's batting only .260 and Kuhel dropped him to eighth place . . . The Nats will rest today and tomorrow but will work out Wednesday. They resume activities at Griffith Stadium Thursday evening against the White Sox . . .

Bosox Split With Macks, 9-8 and 7-5

Philadelphia, July 11 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics split a wild-scoring doubleheader today, the Sox winning the opener, 9-8, in 10 innings and the A's coming back to take the nightcap, 7-5. The second contest, in which Dick Fowler notched his eighth victory, ended after seven and a half innings because of the Pennsylvania Sunday curfew law.

The first of the two games, witnessed by 30,265, was a bitter seesaw battle that lasted three hours and six minutes. Two early Boston leaders were wiped out almost single-handedly by Pete Suder who tripled and socked a three-run homer.

But, with Reliefer Dave (Boo) Ferris pitching airtight ball, the Red Sox refused to give up, tying the count at 6-6 in the fourth and going ahead at 8-6 in the sixth.

Braves Romp, Stretch Lead To 5½ Games

Boston, July 11 (AP).—Connie Ryan, filling in for the crippled Eddie Stanky, collected three hits and drove in as many runs as the Boston Braves swept a three-game series from the Philadelphia Phils, 9 to 4, today before a 14,245 crowd. The win enabled the Tribesmen to extend their National League lead to five and a half games.

The Phillies gave starter Blix Donnelly a two-run lead but the Braves chased him in the second inning when Jeff Heath launched a four-run rally with his eighth homer of the season.

Lefty Warren Spahn, who started for the Tribesmen, had to be yanked in the fourth, when the Phils clubbed him for two more tallies to pull into a 4 to 4 tie.

That deadlock was snapped in the fifth, when the Braves scored thrice on Jim Russell's three-bagger, doubles by Bob Elliott and Bill Salkeld and a Ryan single.

Bob Hogue took over for Spahn and held the visitors under a tight rein until he blistered a finger and gave way to Nelson Potter with two on and none out in the ninth. Potter set three Phils down in order to wind up the game, during which Shortstop Al Dark extended his consecutive hitting streak to 23 tilts.

Mangrum's 268 Wins

Columbus, Ohio, July 11 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum, 33-year-old former National Open champion from Chicago, closed like Citation today to win the third annual $10,000 Columbus Open golf tourney by a single stroke in a fine stretch drive.

Mangrum, the country's second leading money winner for the year, finished with a 3-under-par 68 today for a 72-hole total of 268, 16 under par.

George Schoux, 29-year-old pro from San Francisco, gave up a four-stroke edge at the end of 36 holes, and a three-stroke advantage at the end of 54, to wind up second with 269.

The victory was worth $2000 to Mangrum, while Schoux picked up a $1400 check for the second spot. Stewart (Skip) Alexander, Lexington, N. C., pulled up third with 271, 3 off the pace, for $1000 in prize money.

That trio had the tourney almost to themselves, although Bobby Locke, 1947 champion from South Africa, and big Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., finished 10 under par with 274 to take down $750 each.

Curtis and McLane Win Twice In Swim Finals for Olympics

By Charles A. Grumich

Detroit, July 11 (AP).—Blonde Ann Curtis of San Francisco and Jimmy McLane, the slim Andover schoolboy from Akron, Ohio, came through as double first winners today in the final American Olympic swim team trials.

Miss Curtis beat the women's Olympic record time in the 400-meter free style for the second straight day, and McLane, a 17-year-old endurance ace, easily took the men's 1500-meter free style final.

She previously had won the women's 100-meter sprint finals and McLane had taken the men's 400-meter free style to match himself at the London games with Alex Jany of France, who is universally hailed as the world's greatest swimmer at the shorter distances.

McLane and Miss Curtis scored the second of their triumphs as Californians made a clean sweep of the women's platform diving to present an all-California front in the springboard and high dive events at London.

Another ace from the West Coast, Suzanne Zimmerman of Portland, Oreg., easily won the women's 100-meter back stroke finals timed at 1:17.3.

Miss Curtis, triple world record holder in the women's water sprints and a 22-year-old junior at the University of California, was timed at 5:22.5 in the 400-meter test. In the heats yesterday she did 5:25.0. The Olympic record set by Hendrika Maestenbroek of Holland at Berlin in 1936 stands at 5:26.4 until it is broken in the Olympic Games.

On the All-California women's diving team—leaving with the girl swimmers tonight for New York en route to London by ship—are Victor Manolo Draves of Los Angeles; Zoe Ann Olsen, Oakland; Particia Elsener, San Francisco, and Juno Stover, Pasadena. The four will fill the six women's diving jobs for Uncle Sam at London.

Mrs. Draves won from the high platforms today, with Miss Elsener second and Miss Sover third. Miss Olsen won the springboard finals Friday, with Mrs. Draves second and Miss Elsener third.

Summaries

WOMEN'S 5 AND 10 METER PLATFORM DIVING (Finals)—1, Mrs. Victoria Manolo Draves, Pasadena, Calif. (76.95 points); 2, Patricia Elsener, San Francisco (75.45); 3, Juno Stover, Pasadena, Calif. (70.81).

Majors Discuss Video Problem

St. Louis, July 11 (AP).—Television will be one of the main subjects for discussion tomorrow when the major leagues meet in separate and joint sessions on the day before the fifteenth All-Star game.

Both president, Ford Frick of the National League and Will Harridge of the American, insist they have no vital subjects on their agenda. It is not expected that any dractic action will be taken. Brief sessions are expected.

Veeck Tells Harris to Mind His Yankee Business; Defends Feller's Walkout

CLEVELAND, July 11 (AP).—Bill Veeck, president of the Cleveland Indians, today roundly rapped Manager Bucky Harris' criticism of Feller's withdrawal from the American League All-Star team.

Harris, who will pilot the junior circuit's club Tuesday, yesterday said Feller had no alibi for walking out on the game and that if he (Harris) had anything to do with future All-Star clubs Feller would not be selected.

"Mr. Harris' memory is faulty," Veeck declared. In 1946, the Yankees held Spud Chandler out of the All-Star game so that he was able to pitch against Feller the next day.

"Harris has a pitcher on his own ball club who has a better record than Feller, so for All-Star purpose he would be a more logical selection. Allie Reynolds' record is 10-3, while Fe

Quantico Club Adds to Lead In Golf Event

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

The Quantico Officers Club golf team took a substantial lead in the Northern Virginia round robin golf series by defeating Belle Haven, Washington Golf and Country Club and Fredericksburg Country Club yesterday at Fredericksburg.

The Marines scored 50 points, five more than Belle Haven. Fredericksburg was third with 25 points and the Washington team finished fourth with 24.

Sergt. Bob Broaddus, who recently captured the Quantico club championship, paced his team with an even par 72, while Col. Ben Schriever was Belle Haven's big gun with a 72.

The victory put Quantico 25 points ahead of Washington, who in turn leads Belle Haven by 10 after four matches. Fredericksburg is another ten points behind Belle Haven.

CONGRESSIONAL—Four teams reached the semifinal round of the first flight two-man team championship and two more teams gained the finals of the second flight. R. I. Prouit and G. K. Miller downed E. Jenkins and A. W. Famular, 5 and 4; C. P. Given and Dr. W. J. Evans defeated W. L. Shea and T. K. Wheeler, 2 and 1 in 27 holes; B. L. Eberts and H. F. Backmann beat C. Hagerty and H. C. Curtis, 5 and 4, and Frank McArdle teamed with H. L. Anderson to down E. V. Brumfiel-Eddie Warner, 3 and 1. In the second flight semifinals, L. C. Stewart and W. F. Peterson defeated F. J. Newland and H. A. Mihills, 3 and 2, and L. A. Jennings and John M. Young defeated E. Hodges and Dr. J. R. Currey, 2 and 1. The first flight semifinals and second flight finals will be held Saturday.

WOODMONT—Ralph Goldsmith and Lew Harris shot a 76—12—64 to finish in a deadlock with Dr. Milton Goldman and Dr. Alex Chase, 80—16—64, in the Woodmont men's Scotch foursome club championship. The two teams will play off for the title Sunday.

INDIAN SPRING—The 18-hole medal play handicap tournament for the A. S. Kay trophy finished in a tie between Stanley Hayman and Joe Mehl, who both had net 64s. Hayman shot rounds of 39 and 40 for a gross 79 with 15 strokes handicap while Mehl had a 43-43—86 with 22 strokes handicap. The playoff will be held Sunday.

MANOR—Twenty-two foursomes took part in the best-ball foursome handicap tournament with two foursomes tied for top honors. Ed Kekenes, Gene Archer, Tuffy Leemans and Jack Dailey had a 74—21—53, while Bill Clarkson, F. H. Martell, William Love and Andy Miller shot 72-19—53. In a ladies' handicap medal tournament over the inside nine, Mrs. Ted Burrows was the winner with 38—10—28.

KENWOOD—H. D. Sonneman held the lead in the Kenwood Board of Governors trophy tournament which finishes next weekend as he shot a 36-hole score of 157—26—131. Sonneman had rounds of 76 and 81. In second place was J. M. Jones, 78-82—160, with a 26-stroke handicap for a 134. Third was G. K. LeBrun, 82-81—163 minus 26 strokes for 137, and fourth was Ted Rutley, 74-72—146 with an eight-stroke handicap for 138.

PRINCE GEORGES—Billy Griffin's fine 33, 35—68 gave him the low gross prize in the Kicker's Tournament. In second position was Lieut. Jim Kinder with a gross 72. Low net prize was won by Tommy Lyle, 72—12—60 and S. B. Smith, 73—13—60. O. N. Harmon followed with 77—16—61, and Maj. C. E. Morrison was next with 83—22—61.

EAST POTOMAC—John D. Bachmann and Mary Ruhl teamed to win yesterday's mixed Scotch foursome at East Potomac. The Bachmann-Ruhl twosome shot a 91—25—66, two strokes ahead of N. C. Brown and Nellie Smith, 87—19—68. In third place was the Al Smith-Hilda Barnes combination with 96—26—70. East Potomac Manager Tee Gibraski yesterday announced that Al Treder, formerly pro at Anacostia, will join the staff at East Potomac today as an instructor.

BETHESDA—Three tied for the blind bogey prize with net 69s in yesterday's event. Frank Legost, 80—11—69; Frank Turner, 89—20—69, and Horace Lurton, 77—8—69, won the first drawing, while Dr. J. J. Koopman, with a 98—21—77, took second prize.

ARMY-NAVY—W. I. Barton won the hickey tournament at Army-Navy with 23 points and 23 additional handicap strokes for a 46 total. In a deadlock for second were E. S. Earnhardt, 37 points and 8 handicap for 45 and Paul T. Johnson, 17 points plus 28 handicap for a 45.

WASHINGTON—The Horton Cup tournament for players with handicaps of 12-17, inclusive, starts today at Washington Golf and Country Club. The tournament will be held one evening each week for the next four weeks and will be conducted under match play rules with three-quarter handicap.

Fraser's Homers Decide

Ralph Fraser singled home two runs in the tenth inning to give Jet Motors a 10-8 victory over Crome yesterday in the Prince Georges County B League.

In other B League games, Brandywine walloped Pumphrey's Grocery, 17-8, and the Maryland Aces defeated Gwynn Park, 9-4. Scores in the Prince Georges County A League: Sunnybrook 9, Campus Club 1; Maryland Sport Shop 12, Silver Hill Sand and Gravel 4; Dixie Pig 4, Fort Carroll 1.

Marion Gets Only Safety In 4th Inning

St. Louis, July 11 (AP).—Johnny Wyrostek's first-inning triple led to the only run of the game as Ken Raffensberger pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a one-hit 1-to-0 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Marty Marion singled in the fourth for the lone hit off of Raffensberger. Three other Cardinals got on base—two on walks and one on Grady Hatton's error.

Wyrostek opened the game with his three-base blow and crossed the plate when Benny Zientara grounded out.

Stan Musial went hitless for his second straight day on his three official trips to the plate. He walked the other time.

It was Raffensberger's second one-hitter of the 1948 season—the first one coming against the same Cardinals at Cincinnati May 31. Nippy Jones got the hit that day.

Conway's Homer Beats Dodgers, 3-2

New York, July 11 (AP).—Jack Conway belted his first homer of the season in the ninth inning today to give the New York Giants a 3-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

George Shuba and Carl Furillo homered for the Dodgers and Willard Marshall drove in two Giant runs with a four-bagger and by walking with the bases loaded.

The victory enabled the Giants to regain fourth place from the Dodgers, who won the first two games of the series.

Larry Jansen went the distance for the Giants, scattering seven hits for his tenth victory. It was the first time Jansen ever has beaten the Brooks.

Two District Sailors Score At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., July 11 (AP).—Four of the 10 winners were from out-of-State after final brushes in the smaller classes were run off today in the eleventh annual Annapolis Yacht Club regatta.

Jim Merrill, the national comet champion from the Red Dragon Canoe Club in Edgewater, N. J., scored the only clean sweep of the three heats held yesterday and today. The chief competition for his Barfly came from Eric Nordholm's Frenzy of the Potomac River Sailing Association in Washington.

However, two other Washington skippers managed to finish first in the standings. Frank Marquardt of the Columbia Yacht Club came home first with White Shadow among the stars, and Bob Orme of the Corinthian Yacht Club prevailed among the Chesapeake "20s" with his Blue Water.

Perry-Roach Fight Tops Card Tonight

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez unveils the most attractive fight card in months at Griffith Stadium tonight when, former Marine, Lavern Roach squares off with local middleweight Aaron Perry in the top bout of four scheduled ten-rounders.

A crowd of 10,000 paying $25,000 is expected. Matchmaker Gabe Menendez said the advance sale is three times the pre-fight sale of the recent Jake LaMotta-Ken Stribling bout here.

Roach, ranked as boxing's rookie of 1947 and selected by Gene Tunney as the outstanding boxer developed in World War II, will be favored to beat Perry, with odds quoted at 8-5. The young Texan's stock has soared since his victory over Tony Janiro and his fine although losing performance against Frenchman Marcel Cerdan at Madison Square Garden. He holds victories over Billy Arnold, Norman Rubio and Herbie Kronowitz.

Ken Stribling, local middleweight who fought and lost to Jake LaMotta here recently, renews his feud with Randy Brown, New York Negro who upset the Washington puncher last spring. Off that performance, Brown probably will be a 6-5 favorite.

D. C. Featherweight Jimmy Cooper likewise will be the underdog in his return meeting with Britisher Joe Kay. The English veteran took a split decision over the busy little colored clouter in a supporting bout on the LaMotta-Stribling show.

In the fourth 10-rounder Jackie Cranford, D. C. heavyweight hope, punches against Leo Stoll of Baltimore, who will substitute for Jackie Lyons of Pittsburgh. Lyons twisted his ankle while training.

Ike Williams 13-5 Tonight Over Jack

Philadelphia, July 11 (U.P.).—Ike Williams was favored at 13-5 tonight to keep his world lightweight crown in a 15-round fight with former Champion Beau Jack before an expected crowd of 30,000 at Shibe Park tomorrow night.

Many delegates to the National Democratic Convention, which opens here tomorrow, were expected to watch the bout in which bull-shouldered Beau of Augusta, Ga., will attempt to become the first lightweight to win the title three times.

However, the weather bureau threatened possible showers.

Williams, 24-year-old Negro of Trenton, N. J., was favored because of his apparently more explosive punch and because of doubts about Beau's ability to be strong when pared down to the lightweight limit of 135 pounds.

Brown-skinned Beau, 27, hasn't been down to 135 since he lost the New York version of the crown to Bob Montgomery on March 3, 1944.

Title Fight Will Be On Radio, TV Tonight

Ike Williams' defense of his world lightweight championship will be broadcast and televised in Washington at 10:15 tonight.

Russ Hodges will describe the fight over Station WOL, with Jay Jackson supplying the commentary. Station WMAL-TV will televise the bout.

Rockville Wins, 11-10

Rockville outlasted Sandy Spring in a 33-hit Montgomery County League slugfest yesterday to gain an 11-10 decision. The winners had 18 safeties, the losers 15.

In other league games undefeated Colesville pounded Wheaton for 18 hits and a 23-4 victory and Potomac whipped Bethesda, 6-2. Colesville leads the league with nine straight wins. Potomac is second with an 8-2 record.

Sandlot Leaders Win by Big Scores

Dave Keys batted in five runs with four singles as league-leading Bunker Hill whipped National Cathdral, 13-5, yesterday in the American Legion Junior League.

GPO pushed across six runs in the seventh inning to beat Thad-Dullin, 10-9, and retain its second-place position. Bill Nolan pitched a two-hitter and fanned 10 to give Halloran-Murray a 3-2 win over Costello. Dale Larusen drove in three runs for the winners with a triple and two singles.

Last-place Fort Stevens suffered its fifth straight loss as Peewee Morris and Bob Chatlin each hit home runs for a 12-4 Fort Dupont victory. Morris had two singles otherwise and Chatlin drove in three runs with two more singles.

2 No-Hitters in Fairfax Loop

Walter Sherwood pitched a near perfect no-hit game for Fairfax in the East Fairfax Senior League yesterday that almost was wasted effort. His teammates clubbed four Herndon hurlers for 22 hits and a 35 to 0 rout as Sherwood fanned 10, issued no walks and allowed but one man to reach first on an error.

Russ Herrick almost duplicated Sherwood's feat for Annandale, blanking the White Sox, 2 to 0, on no hits. He walked three and had 14 strikeouts. In a second game Annandale pushed in three runs on a Sox error and Joe Tanneran's double in the 14th inning to win, 6 to 3.

Falls Church beat Falls Church Garage, 6 to 4, and Vienna tripped McLean, 7 to 3, in other league games. Bob Huff gave Falls Church its win when he singled home two runs in the ninth.

Montgomery League Tied

Cissell-Saxon overhauled front-running Silver Spring, 15-7, yesterday to gain a tie for first place in the Montgomery County Park League. Fred Gloyd gave the losers but seven hits while teammate Calvin Brady homered and singled three times to bat in four runs.

Milton Hurdle scored the winning run in the twelfth inning as Kensington Fire Department edged out Myron Cowell, 7-6. Hurdle singled, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on an error.

Glen Echo pounded out a 13-1 victory over VFW and Elks Club won by forfeit from Atchison and Keller.

4 From Area On Pistol Team

Quantico, Va., July 11.—All four Washington area entrants gained places on the American Olympic rifle and pistol team which was selected here today at the end of two days' competition by 125 of the Nation's top marksmen. Washington qualified more men than any State or Territory represented.

Frank Parsons, John Layton, Arthur Cook and Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, each gained a berth on one of the four three-man squads: free rifle, small bore rifle, rapid fire pistol and slow fire pistol.

John Layton, detective lieutenant of the Metropolitan Police, topped the field in rapid fire pistol competition with a 2243 score of a possible 2400. Walsh won a spot on the slow fire pistol squad when he finished second to Quentin Brooks of Berkeley, Calif. Brooks shot 2129, Walsh 2122.

Cook, Eastern rifle champion from the University of Maryland, won the small bore rifle contest with a 2390 for 2400. Parsons was second in the free rifle firing with a 2072. Lieut. Col. Emmet Swanson, USMC, of Minneapolis, Minn., won with 2085.

Watt Hurls All-Stars to 4-Hit, 1-0 Victory

FRANK WATT pitched a four-hit shutout as The Washington Post-Industrial League All-Stars squeezed past Boyce, Va., 1-0, yesterday on the losers' field. Bill Simonds scored the game's only run in the second inning when he reached first on an error and was advanced by Max Coe's single and two infield outs.

Marine Sergt. Syd Eide notched his fourth straight win for McKee Pontiac's Flying Clouds, a 10-5 verdict over Navy Quarters I at the War College. Eide helped his cause with three singles and Corky Rusbarski drove in three runs with an eighth-inning double.

Arcade Pontiac girls softball team won a double victory over the Pulaski Girls in Baltimore yesterday, 3-2 and 5-3. Kitty Casale pitched a two-hitter in the opener and Betsy Riding followed with a three-hit effort.

Tom Groht pitched his seventh straight victory as Walter Reed trounced National Capital, 18-3, in the opener of a three-game series for the VFW District championship.

Winner of the series will be eligible for the VFW national championship playoff at St. Louis in August.

In the West End softball league at Georgetown Playground Harry Chism swatted three doubles and Roger Sawtell pitched a three-hitter as Georgetown Grill whipped McLean Gardens, 12-1. Gordon Harrell batted in the tying and winning run in the seventh inning as the Vets nosed out Post No. 40, 7-6, in another league game.

Jim Gallagher homered with two on in the first inning and Jim O'Hara hurled a six-hitter as the Southeast Merchants coasted to a 4-1 triumph over the Irish War Vets at Fairlawn.

The Takoma Decorators' girls softball team won a doubleheader at Cedarhurst, Long Island, Saturday night. Jerry Fiorello pitched both victories, allowing two hits in the first for a 1-0 win and taking the second 5-4 on a five-hitter.

Juanita Gibson won the nightcap with a three-run homer in the ninth. The games were televised in New York.

BOB COLEMAN allowed but two hits and fanned 16 as Forest Heights took a 9-1 decision from Southeast Stores in an Arena Softball League game . . . Georgetown A. C. trounced the Mount Rainier Vets, 9-3, in the Prince Georges League . . . Eddie's Tavern's Tony Christiani batted in four runs to beat Premier Cab, 8-4 . . . The Hoboes beat the Lions, 7-4, and Capital City AZA edged out Wilner AZA, 5-4, in the Jewish Community Center League . . . Garvin's Grill won two from Craddock Terry, 6-5 and 15-8, in a girls softball twin bill at Farmville, Va. . . . The Northeast Italos whipped the Northwest Tigers twice, 4-3 and 12-6, at Fairlawn . . . Bladensburg, first-half champions, took a doubleheader from Glendale, 15-1 and 16-4, in the Prince Georges County Boys Club League.

Sandlot Leaders Win by Big Scores

Dave Keys batted in five runs with four singles as league-leading Bunker Hill whipped National Cathdral, 13-5, yesterday in the American Legion Junior League.

GPO pushed across six runs in the seventh inning to beat Thad-Dullin, 10-9, and retain its second-place position. Bill Nolan pitched a two-hitter and fanned 10 to give Halloran-Murray a 3-2 win over Costello. Dale Larusen drove in three runs for the winners with a triple and two singles.

Last-place Fort Stevens suffered its fifth straight loss as Peewee Morris and Bob Chatlin each hit home runs for a 12-4 Fort Dupont victory. Morris had two singles otherwise and Chatlin drove in three runs with two more singles.

2 No-Hitters in Fairfax Loop

Walter Sherwood pitched a near perfect no-hit game for Fairfax in the East Fairfax Senior League yesterday that almost was wasted effort. His teammates clubbed four Herndon hurlers for 22 hits and a 35 to 0 rout as Sherwood fanned 10, issued no walks and allowed but one man to reach first on an error.

Russ Herrick almost duplicated Sherwood's feat for Annandale, blanking the White Sox, 2 to 0, on no hits. He walked three and had 14 strikeouts. In a second game Annandale pushed in three runs on a Sox error and Joe Tanneran's double in the 14th inning to win, 6 to 3.

Falls Church beat Falls Church Garage, 6 to 4, and Vienna tripped McLean, 7 to 3, in other league games. Bob Huff gave Falls Church its win when he singled home two runs in the ninth.

Montgomery League Tied

Cissell-Saxon overhauled front-running Silver Spring, 15-7, yesterday to gain a tie for first place in the Montgomery County Park League. Fred Gloyd gave the losers but seven hits while teammate Calvin Brady homered and singled three times to bat in four runs.

Milton Hurdle scored the winning run in the twelfth inning as Kensington Fire Department edged out Myron Cowell, 7-6. Hurdle singled, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on an error.

Glen Echo pounded out a 13-1 victory over VFW and Elks Club won by forfeit from Atchison and Keller.

4 From Area On Pistol Team

Quantico, Va., July 11.—All four Washington area entrants gained places on the American Olympic rifle and pistol team which was selected here today at the end of two days' competition by 125 of the Nation's top marksmen. Washington qualified more men than any State or Territory represented.

Frank Parsons, John Layton, Arthur Cook and Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, each gained a berth on one of the four three-man squads: free rifle, small bore rifle, rapid fire pistol and slow fire pistol.

John Layton, detective lieutenant of the Metropolitan Police, topped the field in rapid fire pistol competition with a 2243 score of a possible 2400. Walsh won a spot on the slow fire pistol squad when he finished second to Quentin Brooks of Berkeley, Calif. Brooks shot 2129, Walsh 2122.

Cook, Eastern rifle champion from the University of Maryland, won the small bore rifle contest with a 2390 for 2400. Parsons was second in the free rifle firing with a 2072. Lieut. Col. Emmet Swanson, USMC, of Minneapolis, Minn., won with 2085.

Watt Hurls All-Stars to 4-Hit, 1-0 Victory

FRANK WATT pitched a four-hit shutout as The Washington Post-Industrial League All-Stars squeezed past Boyce, Va., 1-0, yesterday on the losers' field. Bill Simonds scored the game's only run in the second inning when he reached first on an error and was advanced by Max Coe's single and two infield outs.

Marine Sergt. Syd Eide notched his fourth straight win for McKee Pontiac's Flying Clouds, a 10-5 verdict over Navy Quarters I at the War College. Eide helped his cause with three singles and Corky Rusbarski drove in three runs with an eighth-inning double.

Arcade Pontiac girls softball team won a double victory over the Pulaski Girls in Baltimore yesterday, 3-2 and 5-3. Kitty Casale pitched a two-hitter in the opener and Betsy Riding followed with a three-hit effort.

Tom Groht pitched his seventh straight victory as Walter Reed trounced National Capital, 18-3, in the opener of a three-game series for the VFW District championship.

Winner of the series will be eligible for the VFW national championship playoff at St. Louis in August.

In the West End softball league at Georgetown Playground Harry Chism swatted three doubles and Roger Sawtell pitched a three-hitter as Georgetown Grill whipped McLean Gardens, 12-1. Gordon Harrell batted in the tying and winning run in the seventh inning as the Vets nosed out Post No. 40, 7-6, in another league game.

Jim Gallagher homered with two on in the first inning and Jim O'Hara hurled a six-hitter as the Southeast Merchants coasted to a 4-1 triumph over the Irish War Vets at Fairlawn.

The Takoma Decorators' girls softball team won a doubleheader at Cedarhurst, Long Island, Saturday night. Jerry Fiorello pitched both victories, allowing two hits in the first for a 1-0 win and taking the second 5-4 on a five-hitter.

Juanita Gibson won the night-cap with a three-run homer in the ninth. The games were televised in New York.

BOB COLEMAN allowed but two hits and fanned 16 as Forest Heights took a 9-1 decision from Southeast Stores in an Arena Softball League game . . . Georgetown A. C. trounced the Mount Rainier Vets, 9-3, in the Prince Georges League . . . Eddie's Tavern's Tony Christiani batted in four runs to beat Premier Cab, 8-4 . . . The Hoboes beat the Lions, 7-4, and Capital City AZA edged out Wilner AZA, 5-4, in the Jewish Community Center League . . . Garvin's Grill won two from Craddock Terry, 6-5 and 15-8, in a girls softball twin bill at Farmville, Va. . . . The Northeast Italos whipped the Northwest Tigers twice, 4-3 and 12-6, at Fairlawn . . . Bladensburg, first-half champions, took a doubleheader from Glendale, 15-1 and 16-4, in the Prince Georges County Boys Club League.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Thousands of U. S. Aides Eligible for Promotion July 1

PROMOTIONS: The many thousands of temporary indefinite employes became eligible for in-grade promotions on July 1, Civil Service has reaffirmed this because of the apparent confusion and bewilderment in agency personnel offices.

The story is very simple and it's this: Temporary indefinites are eligible for the small raises under the same conditions and to the same extent as permanent and war service people. There is no mystery about it. The flat $330 pay raise has no bearing on the in-grade raises. But many of the personnel offices seem to be trying to make it as complex as possible.

GPO: The 1000 annual employes of the Government Printing Office are to be given flat $330 pay raises. An order to this effect will be issued today by Public Printer John J. Deviny. GPO officials were able to convince suspicious members of Congress that their annual rates were in line with classification salaries in other Federal agencies and that it was only fair to give their employes the $330 boost.

The only annual employes who are exempted are the foremen and assistant foremen who had their salaries raised last December when the per diems were given an increase.

INTERNAL REVENUE has given its field offices the authority to hire 1930 additional employes. Also, it has released $950,000 to the same offices for the promotions of enforcement employes. At least 2000 workers will get grade promotions out of the money.

POSTOFFICE: Paul Aiken, the Second Assistant Postmaster General, is being talked of as the new executive director of the Democratic National Committee. An able administrator, he served with the committee during the '40 and '44 campaigns.

NOTES: The Budget Bureau no longer clears Government publications. Funds for this work were knocked out by Congress . . . Roy North is not expected to be given a recess appointment as District postmaster. Gordon Bell will continue to serve as acting postmaster. The Senate failed to act on North's nomination . . . The Navy has begun a wage survey of its per diem workers in the Seattle area . . . Lieut. Gen. R. A. Wheeler has withdrawn his request for retirement and he will remain as chief of the Engineers.

PEOPLE: Melville E. Locker, a Treasury lawyer who specialized in international finance, has resigned to be an assistant to Eric Kohler, controller of Economic Cooperation . . . Norman Stoll has resigned as assistant general counsel of Commerce to be general counsel of Bonneville Power Authority . . . V. Lewis Bassie, the economic advisor to the Commerce Secretary, will resign to join the faculty at the University of Illinois . . . James Fay Hall, jr., has resigned from the legal staff of the United States Tax Court to enter private law practice here.

DISTRICT: Civil Service will announce an exam soon to fill about 200 vacancies in the District police and fire departments. The jobs will pay $2720 to start. Applicants will be required to take a written test. There will be no experience or education requirements. Young men who live in the District, Maryland and Virginia will be eligible to take the exam. Appointees must live within a radius of 12 miles of the Capitol Building.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: A total of 625 competitors in the messenger exam given last April have been given eligible ratings. More than 400 flunked out . . . War service and temporary employees in P-2 to P-6 archivist jobs must be fired by September 6 unless they took and passed the archivist exam given last year . . . Civil Service has an exam open for CAF-1 through CAF-4 clerks for appointments in Federal offices in Virginia except in Alexandria and Arlington. Those many Virginia clerical people here who plan to take the next Nation-wide exam could get some practice by taking the one in their home State. You can get details at Civil Service's fourth regional office here.

VA: The President vetoed that bill which would have given the Veterans Administrator authority to fix salaries of hospital attendants and other employes in VA hospitals. However, these VA employes will get the $330 flat increase. They stood to get even larger raises if the bill had been signed into law.

BUDGET BUREAU will make an analysis of each agency budget to determine how much of the cost of the pay raise, if any, can be absorbed. It has no intentions of issuing a flat order which would compel all agencies to absorb the pay act cost.

The case of each agency will be decided on its merits. Some few may be able to pay the entire higher wage cost out of available funds; others can absorb some of the cost, and still others none of the cost. Where additional funds are needed, Congress will be asked to supply them next year. Budget followed this same procedure after the pay raise two years ago.

New Church And Chapel Dedicated In Services

$200,000 Edifice Opened in Bethesda; United Brethren Bishop at Arlington

A new church was dedicated, another used for the first time and ground for a third broken at ceremonies in the Greater Washington area yesterday.

At the first service at the new $200,000 St. John's Episcopal Church, Bradley la. and Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, the Rev. William F. Creighton, rector, offered prayers of dedication.

He compared the church to an embassy of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, and stated that we are ambassadors in our generation just as Paul was in his.

In Arlington, the chapel of the new Evangelical United Brethren Church, North Glebe rd. at 25th st., was dedicated. It was the second of four units planned by the church.

Speaker at the service was Bishop J. Balmer Showers of the eastern area of the Evangelical United Brethren Church. The key to the new building was presented to the Rev. George B. Riley, pastor, by H. F. Lane, chairman of the building committee.

At the ground breaking for the parish hall of the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, 6401 Connecticut ave., the minister, Dr. Clifford Homer Richmond, hailed the event as the beginning of "a new era" for the church. He paid tribute to the loyalty of members who had worked on the project.

George E. Harris, lay leader, was in charge of the ceremony and presented the spade to William L. Orem, jr., chairman of the building committee.

Christmas Anthems

It was Christmas in July at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw. At two morning services the congregation joined in Christmas anthems and heard the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford speak on "New Creatures in Christ."

The collection at the two services totaled over $1400. Funds this year will be used to send new missionaries to the field.

Speaking at the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, Kalorama near Columbia rd., the Rev. Richard D. Pursel of Congress Heights Presbyterian Church told of the work of the Disciple Andrew in founding the Christian Church. Andrew, he said, was a man of moderate ability, much like the average man today.

Each time Andrew appears in the Bible he is bringing someone to Christ, Mr. Pursel said, urging the same sort of personal evangelism today.

Pastor William F. Bruenning of Christ Lutheran Church, 16th and Gallatin sts, nw., urged action in his sermon. Many people he said, expect to be Christians, yet they do nothing to foster spiritual and religious growth.

Australian in Pulpit

The Rev. Alan Walker, minister Sydney, Australia, spoke at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw. He urged Christians to apply their moral standards in the world though they are a numerically small group.

Reform, he said, will come not from the oppressed but from someone who steps down and identifies himself with those who need help. "He who accepts the liabilities of the Cross will also receive its triumphs and assets," he concluded.

At St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Arlington, the Rev. George Tittman, rector, attacked the "man-centered world." "In our society God is on the frings of things," he asserted. He urged that Christians analyze the air around them lest they be caught in a catastrophe which may result from their man-centered world.

America is living on a "plateau of privilege" in a world of want, the Rev. Ward W. Hurlburt warned at Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne. If we are smug and have no heart, the world will no longer look up to us. In the same way we may face the day of judgment by God and be found lacking if we do not heed the warnings of Jesus, he concluded.

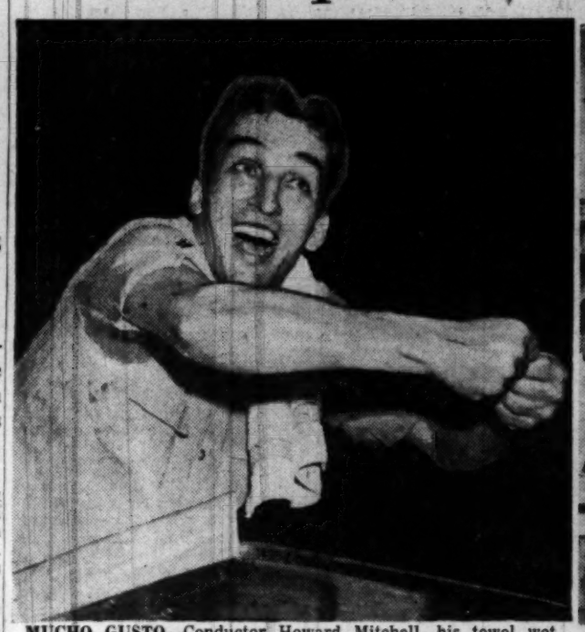
Dress Optional at Watergate Rehearsals



MUCHO GUSTO—Conductor Howard Mitchell, his towel wet with perspiration, urges the symphony orchestra violin section to give out more volume

EASY DOES IT—Dress as you please so long as the music is solid—that is the rehearsal policy. Open collars, no ties and cool slacks are acceptable in the string bass section. But when night falls and the real concert begins, the musicians don dress-up outfits

Schubert A Triumph at Watergate

By Paul Hume

Vienna, Budapest, Prague, and Washington combined to make last night's Watergate concert another triumph of music and weather.

Cloudless skies and a moderate temperature plus some of Washington's handsomest scenery were local donations. Budapest sent Agi Jambor to play some unfamiliar music for piano, while Venna and Prague came to mind as we listened to music by Mozart, Schubert, Strauss, and Kreisler.

Howard Mitchell revealed a popular favorite in its original beauty as he led a superbly paced "Unfinished" symphony by Schubert. As in the Beethoven Fifth Wednesday evening, he showed how simply some masterpieces must be unfolded if they are to communicate their composers' intentions. Once a conductor resolves to give due regard to a creator's tempo markings, long strides have been taken toward artistic ends.

But it was not only in his timing that Mitchell gave Schubert's lyrical score its great appeal for the huge audience last night. It was equally compelling in the sound he drew from the orchestra, where a newly formed woodwind section added fresh laurels to its growing crown. The clarinet solos which dot the first movement were unusually touching in Sidney Forrest's hands, while Wallace Mann and the new oboe player delivered their lines in fine style throughout.

Jambor has constantly increased the shading in her playing in the time we have heard her. Last night she provided a wide scale of nuance and passage work clear in detail and poetic in tone.

Mr. George Titus of the Cultural Committee of the Board of Trade spoke briefly about the new shell in which the concerts are played. To our ears, the amplifying system is the finest we have yet heard. A few times the microphones give something of a troublesome feedback, but otherwise the sound, both instrumental and vocal, comes out clearly, with no distortion, whether loud or soft.

Wednesday night: French program, with Albert Spalding, violinist in Lalo's "Symphonie espagnole" and orchestral music by Debussy, Ravel, Ibert, Berlioz and Gretry. Concerts begin at 8:15!

FREE CONCERT—No tickets necessary to hear the orchestra whip its concert numbers into shape. The orchestra rehearses every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday morning for programs those evenings

3 Rehearsals Held Weekly For Concerts at Watergate

There's a lot of music at the Watergate these days besides the music you hear at the evening concerts.

Every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday morning you can hear the orchestra and its soloists down on the barge preparing the concert for that evening. From 10 in the morning until 12:30, Howard Mitchell and the instrumentalists he has gathered together for the summer work over the rough spots.

"I want to hear those strings," Mitchell shouts at the fiddles. "Where's that ya-ta-ta ya-ta-ta in the drums! For heaven's sake, hit it!" Then they start again, and a little later, he stops them. "Naw, naw, go back to three measures after 21. Put a little more oomph in the clarinet solo." (He's referring to a really sweet Gershwin lick at the moment.)

Did you ever wonder how music was put together? If you have, and want a master lesson in the art, drop around to the Watergate any concert morning, and hear how 90 to 100 minutes of music is rehearsed in just exactly 135 minutes of playing time.

Under union regulations, rehearsals are limited to two and a half hours, during which 15 minutes rest time must be allowed. This means that a conductor has to have his music well in mind and hand before he starts rehearsing, and must use the precious minutes with 150 per cent efficiency.

Rehearsals are held right on the stage of the new barge, which was built during the past winter at a cost of nearly $75,000. A large canvas shields the players from sun and wind, but you can hear the music conductor distinctly. It's a fine chance to satisfy your curiosity as to what goes on when an orchestra rehearses.

During the intermission you might even go right up to one of the players and ask some of the questions you've always been wanting to ask someone in a symphony orchestra. Go ahead.

The Watergate concerts, now in their second week, are drawing large crowds thrice weekly. Made possible through the generosity of numerous guarantors, the concerts were really put across by the Board of Trade and the National Symphony office.

Mitchell, doing an outstanding piece of work, is to conduct all concerts except the ballet night, July 23d, when Franz Allers will direct.

That evening's soloists are Nora Kaye and Igor Youskevitch, two leading members of Ballet Theater.

Tickets for all remaining concerts, with such top-notch soloists as Albert Spalding, Gladys Swarthout, Todd Duncan, Claudio Arrau, and Earl Wild, are on sale at Kitt's on G st. The Watergate box office opens during the week at 7 p. m., and at 1 o'clock on Sundays.

Four Bodies Are Recovered In Drownings

Area waters yesterday yielded the bodies of four Saturday drowning victims.

Grapplers recovered the body of Ernest M. Montgomery, 44, carpenter, of Triadelphia, Md., at 3:25 a. m. yesterday after dragging the lake at Brighton Dam, Patuxent River, Triadelphia, for nearly five hours.

Montgomery, police said, disappeared within sight of two sons, Ernest, jr., 12, and Richard, 8, and a brother, Eldon E. Montgomery, with whom he had been fishing.

In the District, a fisherman snagged the body of William F. Robinson, 47, of 1824 Stanton ter. se. A son, William, jr., who identified the body, said his father left home Saturday to fish in the Anacostia.

William C. Ware, 40, of 1241 1st st. se., told police his hook caught the clothing of the body off the Smoot Sand Gravel Co. dock, at South Capitol st.

Maryland police reported recovery of the bodies of John Roberson, 64, and his wife, Jennie, 62, of 1832 Potomac ave. se., off Breezy Point Beach, Calvert County, Md. The couple drowned Saturday when a rowboat in which they were fishing capsized in the Chesapeake.

Two other occupants of the boat were rescued. Roberson was an engineer for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and had lived in Washington for 11 years.

Brannan to Open New Church Home

Charles F. Brannan, Secretary of Agriculture, will officiate at the opening of the $15,000 home erected by St. Michael's Catholic Church in Silver Spring, Md., to raise money for a new church in the parish.

The home, at Pershing dr. and Fenton st., Silver Spring, will be opened Saturday at 2 p. m. It will remain open to the public daily from noon to 10 p. m., until the middle of October, when it will be sold.

The Rev. Francis X. Lannon, an assistant rector of St. Michael's Church, is in charge of the fund-raising plan. He said yesterday that the home is donated by the Golden Key Pre-Fab. Co., of Baltimore, and has been furnished by the Hecht Co. Other Washington utilities companies and firms have also donated services in completing the house.

L. C. Carter Leaves Church Music Position

Members of the Petworth Baptist Church, 557 Randolph st. nw, yesterday accepted with regret the resignation of Luther C. Carter, minister of music for the past year.

Carter's resignation becomes effective August 1. He has accepted a post at an Atlanta, Ga., church. The Rev. James O. Rodgers, the church's pastor, yesterday preached for the last time. He has resigned to accept a pastorate in Winter Haven, Fla.

Newsmen Hit Mooted Md. Press 'Gags'

Proposed court rules which opponents say would "gag" the press in Maryland were attacked yesterday by newsmen over Radio Station WGAY, in Silver Spring, Md.

Pointing up their protests, they compared information Washington papers gave readers in the recent capture of the alleged Baltimore slayer of two little girls to that printed by "already shackled" Baltimore papers.

Speakers were Joseph M. Mathias, Bethesda attorney and county newsman; John W. Coffman, jr., president of the Montgomery County Press Association and editor of the Takoma Journal, and Phillip J. Austensen, president of the Prince Georges County Press Association and Maryland reporter for The Washington Post. The program was conducted by Ernie Tannen, "Community Reporter" for WGAY.

Mathias told the radio audience that facts of the alleged slayer's confessions, his pictures, news that he led police to recover the death knife and other aspects of the crime were barred to Baltimore newspapers by contempt of court rules in that city. These, he said, were freely given Washington reporters and printed in Washington newspapers.

Austensen argued that the right of mothers in Washington and Baltimore to know they need no longer fear the attacker "ranks equally, at least, with the right to a fair trial for the slayer." He expressed doubts that full accounts, as printed in Washington papers, would in any way interfere with a fair trial of the accused.

The three attacked press restrictions imposed under proposed rules of procedure in criminal actions throughout the State's system of Circuit Courts.

Particularly opposed was proposed rule No. 9, which Coffman said would forbid newsmen from printing accounts of actions and statements of a suspect and bar State's defense attorneys and others officially concerned with the case from discussing its aspects for publication.

Police Seek Three Thugs In Street Robberies

Four Assaults on Men Pedestrians Reported in Few Hours Saturday

District police yesterday sought a trio of thugs believed to have engineered four consecutive robbery attacks on men pedestrians Saturday night.

Vicitms of the assaults, police said, could identify the thugs by but little more than size. Two were said to be about 5 foot and 5 foot 2 inches tall; the third, 5 foot 11. All were said to be Negroes between 20 and 30 years of age.

First report was made shortly after 10 p. m., Saturday by Charles W. Fowkes of 215 N. Washington st., Alexandria, Va. He said he was beset by a band of thugs walking on Independence ave. near 14th st. sw. They beat him to the ground, tore off his trouser pocket and fled with $1.30. Fowkes was treated at the Naval dispensary, 19th st. and Constitution ave., for head cuts.

Robbed by Trio

Three and a half hours later, Harvey P. Cutsinger, 31, reported he was chased and caught by the trio in the 300 block of New York ave. nw. He was overpowered and his billfold, containing $20, taken. The victim, who gave his address as 1249 New York ave. nw., was unhurt.

At 2 a. m., Ray Moore, 37, of 456 Delaware ave. sw., was attacked by three men armed with bottles and a board, he told police. His assailants took $8 from his pants pocket and fled the scene at 1st and D sts. sw. Moore was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a a cut forehead.

The fourth attack was reported at 2:40 a. m. by Howard Whalen, of 3611 11th st. nw., who said he was assaulted while walking on Independence ave. at Canal st. sw. Coin change in his pocket was taken by the thugs, who beat him about the head. Whalen was treated for head cuts at Casualty Hospital.

Lured Into Alley

In another assault case reported late Saturday, the victim told police he was lured into an alley by a woman only to be attacked and robbed of $47 by two men. The attack occurred in the 500 block of G st nw., he told police.

Police identified the victim as Henry S. Kuhns, 29, of 809 Mt. Vernon pl. nw. He described his assailants as white men. One, he told police, was about 24 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, and had brown eyes and black curly hair. The man was wearing a white T-shirt and dark trousers, said Kuhns, who was unable to describe the second man.

Driver Hits Man, Gives Up Later

A motorist gave himself up to police late yesterday after a morning traffic accident in which he bowled over a pedestrian who in turn knocked down two other pedestrians.

No charges were placed against the driver, Lawrence Angolia, 22, of 515 68th st., Seat Pleasant, Md., but a hearing is scheduled today in the corporation counsel's office. The accident was at 14th and H sts. nw.

Struck by the car as he crossed the street, Marine Sergt. Robert Virden, 27, of Quantico, Va., was treated at Emergency Hospital for leg and head injuries, then transferred to Bethesda Naval Hospital.

As he dropped to the pavement, police said, he felled two companions, Sergt. Maj. Daniel Houghtaling, 29, and his wife, Audrey, 28. The Houghtalings were treated at Emergancy for cuts and bruises.

Police said Angolia visited a friend in Virginia after the accident, but voluntarily surrended later Sunday after police queried his family for his whereabouts.

A two-car collision at 6th and E sts. ne., about 6 p. m., landed John Casalet, 34, of 1707 Vermont ave. nw., and his passenger, Miss Allah Francis Thompson, 26, Navy clerk-typist, 3114 16th st. nw., in Casualty Hospital with concussions and cuts.

Casalet, returning from a visit to Annapolis, collided with a car driven by Richard Hammond, 19, WEAM pianist, of Herndon, Va. Neither Hammond nor his passenger, a brother, Frank H., 25, of Landover, Md., was injured.

Wilbert Lee Jackson, 41, of 1630 Gales st. ne., was taken to Gallinger Hospital in a taxi about 3:30 a. m., after his car careened off a road near Oxon Hill, Md., and rammed a tree. Jackson was reported in serious condition with back injuries.

Poison Probed In Death of Air Force Wife

Mrs. Lucille Patterson Kurtz, 39, wife of the assistant director of the Bolling Field Air Force Band, died yesterday in the Bolling Field Base Hospital, apparently of poisoning.

Mrs. Kurtz

A death certificate was withheld pending further examination and chemical tests.

Mrs. Kurtz collapsed Saturday about 9:25 p. m., across the street from her home at 4337 Halley ter. se, police said.

She had showered and dressed for a dinner engagement the couple had with friends at Andrews Field, according to her husband, Chief Warrant Officer Samuel Kurtz. Kurtz told Bolling Field officials he noticed a glass and an empty bottle of poison in the kitchen when he went downstairs to look for his wife.

The couple was married last July 13 at the Bolling Field Chapel in the only triple wedding ceremony in the base's history. Kurtz and his wife had each been married previously.

Mrs. Kurtz, formerly Mrs. Apgood, was born in Sheridan, Wyo., and was graduated from the University of Wyoming in 1931. She taught music for several years in public schools in Wyoming, then managed her own dance band for a few years.

She had been a field representative for the Mills Music Co. in New York for about four years when she met Kurtz in March, 1947, at a music educators' conference in Lebanon, Pa.

Mrs. Kurtz left her job after her marriage but still worked "off and on" for the music company, making out-of-town sales trips, friends said. She returned from her latest trip last week, according to Sergt. Norman Irvine of 4 Alden way, Forest Heights, Md., a friend of Kurtz.

3 Children Abandoned At Station

Three children, the oldest five years old, were found abandoned in Union Station last night with a note from their mother: ". . . they are hungry and I didn't have money to feed them."

Washington Terminal Policeman E. N. said the youngsters were found about midnight on a bench in the station, togther with a bag of clothing and the mother's note. The note revealed the children were Rosalind, 1 year old; Ronald 2, and Theodora, 5.

The children were described as Negro, dressed "fairly well," with the girls in white dresses.

The note said in part:

"To whom it may concern: I am leaving my children here because I didn't have a home for them. We spent the night here last night . . . I didn't have money to feed them.

"If I find a job and a home I will be back to get them. I love my children and this hurts me more than anything to leave them. Tell them I love them . . . Mother."

Reid turned the children over to a member of the Police Women's Bureau, who took them to the Children's Home for the night.

Area News in Brief

Loot of Only $15 Sets Pies Aflying

Apparently irate at finding only $15, a thief or thieves early yesterday went in for an orgy of pie-throwing at Martin's Bakery, 2339 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Crust and fillings of 40 pies were splattered all over walls and showcases of the bakery's store, police said.

The dismal circumstances were reported to police by Henry Hemmerich, brother of Martin Hemmerich, owner and operator of the establishment. The premises were entered sometime before 2 a. m. yesterday.

Entry was gained, police investigators said, by forcing a skylight over the work rooms. Stolen they said, was a cash box containing the $15. It had been kept under a counter in the first-floor showroom.

"I wish they'd taken the pies, too," brooded Hemmerich.

yesterday that $93 in change, 30 cartons of cigarettes and 12 cartons of chewing gum were taken from the stand sometime Saturday night.

Mrs. Majerska Ill

Mrs. Anna Majerska, released from jail last Friday on probation after she was sentenced for beating her 5-year-old daughter, was under treatment for a nervous condition in Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

Mrs. Majerska, who lives at 1635 Q st. nw., was sentenced last Tuesday to serve a 10-day jail sentence and pay a $50 fine or serve an additional 30 days for simple assault on her daughter, Janet, on May 10.

After her sentence was suspended by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson, she went Saturday to the jail to collect personal belongings. She collapsed there and was taken to the hospital. Hospital attaches said Mrs. Majerska's condition "appears to be satisfactory" and she may be released today.

Roof Victims 'Fair'

A building contractor and his helper, who were seriously injured Saturday when a concrete roof collapsed on them, were reported in fair condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday.

George W. Absher, 58, of 3301 Alabama ave. se., the contractor, and Richard Groce, 50, of 455 Delaware ave. sw., his helper, received compound leg fractures when the freshly poured roof at 3736 Bangor st. se. collapsed and pinned them against supporting beams.

Servicemen to Be Guests

Washington servicemen, their wives and patients from the Walter Reed and Bethesda Naval Hospitals, will be guests of the Pentecostal Holiness Youth Society aboard the S. S. Potomac tonight. Tuesday night the Lions Club of Alexandria will also be hosts to servicemen in the area on a cruise aboard the S. S. Potomac. Both cruises begin at 8:30 and leave from the 7th st. wharves.

Breaks Back in Fall

John Brinkley, 41, of 307 Rittenhouse st. nw., an electrician for the Warfield Sandford Co., was found semiconscious beside the spillway of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal early yesterday. Admitted to Gallinger Hospital with a broken back, he told police he had fallen from the wall along the canal some time during the night and had been unable to move. His condition was reported serious.

Concession Robbed

John E. Weddle, 36, operator of a concession at the Chevy Chase bus terminal, reported to police

Choose Winner Tuesday

Winner of the "Mrs. Fairlington" contest, sponsored by the Fairlington Association, will be decided Tuesday on a moonlight cruise down the Potomac to Mount Vernon. The boat will leave the Mount Vernon dock on Maine ave. at 8:30 p. m.

A field of 24 contestants has been entered by friends. Prizes have been donated by local merchants. The association will use proceeds for community work.

Child Drinks Turpentine

Geraldine Grant, 18-month-old daughter of William J. Grant, 307 Larkspur rd., Morningside, Md., was reported in fair condition at Providence Hospital yesterday after swallowing an undetermined amount of turpentine.

Homewood Citizens Enjoy Oldtime Picnic . . .

The Washington Post

Blind Woman Kicked and Cut With Glass

A woman said by police to be blind and pregnant was kicked and cut with broken glass in one of three serious Sunday assaults reported by police.

The woman, Anna Henderson, 32, of 2604 I st. nw., was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and bruises of the face and body.

Police said she was kicked by Clifton Smith, 43, of 1812 Florida ave. nw., who was charged with assault and slashed with broken glass by Henrietta Smith, 46, of the Florida ave. address, who was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. The fracas developed about 2:30 a. m. Sunday during an argument at the Smith home, according to police.

In another assault, James Little, 29, of 11 Leonard ct. sw., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital in undetermined condition, with possible skull fracture. He said he was struck with an unknown object at 3d and E sts. sw. by two men, later arrested by police and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police identified the assailants as George Martin, 36, of 307 Virginia ave. sw., and James Martin, 27, same address.

Swamp Fire Smoke Drifts Over Wide Area

Billowing clouds of smoke from a fire in the Dismal Swamp near Norfolk, Va., drifted as far as Alexandria and Mount Vernon areas last night.

The Weather Bureau here reported at 9:30 p. m. that a southerly wind at 10 miles an hour had cut visibility over the metropolitan area to about three miles in an hour's time.

The southerly winds, the Weather Bureau reported, had cut surface visibility over Norfolk down to 1 mile during the day and limited visibility over Richmond as low as 3 miles.

Doctors Here Invent Device To Aid Sleep Potion Victims

Two Washington physicians have devised a chest ring to aid victims of overdoses of sleeping potions, it was reported in Science, weekly journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Idea of the pneumatic rubber ring is to stimulate the patient's natural breathing, according to Dr. William L. Howell and Dr. Augustus C. P. Bakos.

One effect of an overdose of a sleeping potion is the slowing of breathing below the minimum needed to sustain life, Dr. Howell explained yesterday.

Although experiments on human beings have been too few for positive conclusions, Dr. Howell said exhaustive tests on dogs have more than doubled breathing rates of animals in such comas.

"Since the device has worked on dogs, we feel it should work similarly on humans," declared Dr. Howell, long-time practicing physician in Washington.

One of the ring's chief advantages over artificial respiration, he explained, is that it induces faster breathing under the patient's own reflexes.

He described the rings as hollow bands of rubber which terminate in straps. The bands are inflated to a low pressure and strapped across the chest, compressing the chest and "initiating reflex drives."

Dr. Howell said he and Dr. Bakos, resident in physiology at Georgetown University School of Medicine, began their experiments about four months ago.

B'nai B'rith Group In Annual Session

The annual meeting of the national membership commission of B'nai B'rith got under way yesterday at the Statler Hotel with more than 75 members attending.

The meeting is to plan the organization's membership program and commission operations for 1948-49. Sessions will end today.

National Director Harry Brager said last night that results of the seminar discussions and actions taken would be revealed today.

Man Seriously Burned By Ashes in Furnace

Herbert Drummond, 40, an employe of the Capitol power plant, New Jersey ave. and E st. se., was seriously burned yesterday when hot ashes fell on him as he was cleaning the furnace hopper.

Drummond, who lives at 5308 Nash st. ne., was admitted to Providence Hospital with first, second and third degree burns on his entire body. His condition was reported as fair.

Prince Georges Police Exams Set for Thursday

Examinations to establish an eligible list for appointment to the Prince Georges county police force will be held Thursday at 7:30 p. m. at the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md.

Approximately 50 applicants are expected to undergo the tests. Two vacancies exist on the force, one caused by the fatal shooting of Pvt. Charles F. Caldwell while making an arrest June 12.

To Rural Conference

Three Maryland agricultural leaders will participate in the conference of the American Country Life Association which opens Tuesday in Berea, Ky. They are Dr. Roger B. Corbett, University of Maryland; Mrs. R. C. F. Weagly, Hagerstown, president of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Edward F. Holter, Middletown, National Grange official.

Brain Surgeon In Europe for World Parley

Dr. Walter Freeman, Washington's nationally-known promoter of brain surgery to ease worry or intractable pain, was reported in London yesterday preliminary to heading his first International Conference on Psychosurgery.

The conference, scheduled for August 3-7 in Lisbon, was organized by Dr. Freeman and a committee of surgeons and neurologists.

It is designed to bring together experts in surgery and neurology from the principal countries of Europe and North and South America, principally to discuss prefrontal lobotomy. The conference is being dedicated to Dr. Egaz Moniz, of Portugal, who introduced the brain operation in 1933.

Prefrontal lobotomy, since improved and popularized in this country by Dr. Freeman and Dr. Watts, both of this city, involves the severing or separation of brain fibers in the front of the brain. Performed to correct emotional disorders or obsessions, it is still a controversial subject in the healing professions.

Parents Meet Tonight In Drive for '3 Rs'

Montgomery County parents who are urging more emphasis upon the "three Rs" in county schools will meet at 9 o'clock tonight at the Boulevard Bowling Alleys, Wisconsin ave. and Leland st.

H. Stanley Stine, president of the county board of education, plans to attend, he said. The group is expected to discuss plans for gathering 5000 signatures on a petition urging elimination of "frills" and a return to the "three Rs" of education.

J. B. Aikman Dies; Retired Businessman

John Barr Aikman, 82, retired businessman and father of Duncan Aikman, veteran Washington newspaperman, died yesterday afternoon at Doctors Hospital.

Mr. Aikman's death followed a hip injury suffered at his home in Hillsboro, Va., on Tuesday.

A native of Washington, Ind., Mr. Aikman was a member of a family that settled in the West before the War of 1812. He was one of the two oldest graduates of the Rose Polytechnic Institute in Terre Haute, Ind., where he received a degree in mechanical engineering in 1887.

He was general manager of the J. R. Duncan Paper and Stationery Co. of Terre Haute, Ind., until 1910. From 1920, until his retirement in 1945, he was general manager of the Vermont Talc Co. of Chester, Vt. Following his retirement he moved to his home in Hillsboro, Va., with his wife, the former Miss Flora Lee Duncan of Terre Haute.

Beside his wife and son, Mr. Aikman is survived by three grandchildren, Mrs. Paul Breslin of New York; Edward Aikman, who is a student at George Washington University, and Miss Ann Aikman, also of Washington, who is a senior at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Mr. Murphy, a native of Washington, died at Providence Hospital following an illness of several weeks.

He had been with GOP more than 30 years. In 1926, he married the former Miss Elizabeth Weller of Baltimore and moved to Alexandria, where they made their home at 102 E. Oxford ave. He had for many years been a member of the Del Ray Baptist Church in Alexandria.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, Edward, jr., and Robert L. Murphy; a daughter, Miss Evelyn R. Murphy, and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Schultheis, all of Alexandria.

James Baden Dies at 67; Rites Tuesday

James I. Baden, examiner for the United States Maritime Commission for 10 years and former banker, died Saturday at Doctors Hospital, after a heart attack suffered at work on Thursday.

Mr. Baden

Mr. Baden, who was 67, lived at 4340 Nichols ave., sw.

Born in the District, he was a graduate of Eastern High School and Georgetown University Law School. He began as a clerk in the National Bank of Washington, and rose to assistant cashier in 15 years. About 1913 he joined the Commercial National Bank here as executive vice president, remaining there for 20 years. He joined the Maritime Commission in 1938.

In 1915, Mr. Baden married Elizabeth Barbour. Active in the Holy Name Society, Mr. Baden was also a member of the District Council of the Knights of Columbus. He served as treasurer of the Kiwanis Club here, as director of the Hyattsville Building Association and belonged to the Washington Board of Trade and Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Besides his wife, he leaves two sons, James H., jr., and Thomas B., of the Nichols ave. address, and a daughter, Mrs. Ralph A. Parker of Forest Heights, Md. Three sisters also survive: Sarah A. Stanford of the Nichols ave. address, Mrs. Gertrude B. Espey of Annandale, Va., and Mrs. B. A. Dubois of Raleigh, N. C.

Funeral services will be held at the Nichols ave. home Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. and a solemn requiem mass will be sung at 10 a. m. in the Church of the Assumption, 3405 Nichols ave. se. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Technical Group Set Up to Solve Radio Problems

A technical advisory committee has been set up to help Federal agencies and professional and industrial groups solve problems of radio, television and other electronics equipment.

It was created jointly by the Radio Manufacturers Association and the Institute of Radio Engineers as a central clearing house on problems arising from the "rapid developments" in radio and electronic services.

Philip F. Siling, chief of the RCA frequency bureau here, will serve as committee chairman. Donald G. Fink, editor of Electronics Magazine, New York, is vice chairman.

2 District Men To Be Reburied At Arlington

Two Washington men, who died in World War II, will be among the 20 Army war dead to be reburied at 2 p. m. today in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Honeycutt

Pfc. James D. Honeycutt, 20, brother of Walter A. and Robert C. Honeycutt, 1954 Calvert st. nw., was killed July 14, 1944, in France. He was a rifleman in the 85th division, entering the Army in July, 1943. Besides his brothers, he leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jessie A. Honeycutt, New London, N. C.

First Lieut. Thomas M. Keely, jr., son of Mrs. Garnette C. Keely, 612 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., died April 30, 1944, of wounds received in Hollandia, New Guinea. He was posthumously awarded the Silver Star and the Purple Heart. He leaves his mother; two sisters, Miss Mary Jane Keely, and Mrs. Bert Adams and two brothers, Richard K. and John C. Keely, all of the Washington address.

Falls Road Man Dies After Slip On Cellar Steps

Wallace Crown, 60, died yesterday at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md., following a fall down stairs at his home on Falls rd. near Potomas, Md., earlier in the day.

Mr. Crown had been bathing in the basement, Dr. F. J. Broschart, county medical examiner, was told, and while going up the stairs about 9:30 a. m., slipped and fell. He died at 4:10 p. m.

Mr. Crown resided with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen.

Democratic Donkey Acts Up; Delegates Stubborn, As Nomination Nears

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—"A fine convention if you like funerals," growled a lobby kibitzer. Though long drawn faces are the rule rather than exception along the Bellevue-Stratford third-floor corridors, in offshooting clutch of party offices, though big wig Democrats are savoring more than a soupcon of embalming fluid in their liquid stimulators—preconvention ballyhoo is far from funereal. As afternoon wore into even more exhausting night all sorts of things began to pop.

The machine parked in the papier mache donkey atop the Bellevue Stratford marquee got overheated, went haywire, though the jack continued to nod his head, blink electric eyes, for a brief unforgettable moment smoke issued from an unorthodox orifice—street noise decibels mounted hideously; a Wallace sound truck to and fro blaring, "Say yes, to progress; come to Shibe Park"—traffic snarled around Eisenhower. Mess Sergt. Marty Snyder's red jeep tented with his boss' photo. Snyder, through a loud speaker, plugged Ike inexhaustibly, handed out copies of a marching song titled, of course, "We Want Eisenhower for President."

A chain of teen-age kids stepped a picket-line for Douglas in front of the Bellevue-Stratford, wearing sweat shirts stamped with their hero's name, handing out buttons, paper fans printed with the justice's picture and the slogan, "I'm a Douglas Fan," they chanted, "why lose with Truman when you can win with Douglas." Tough looking characters held up a huge cardboard banner, "United Auto Workers—CIO—a million workers for Douglas-Walter Reuther.

Senator Barkley Makes Up

SENATOR Tom Connally in his long coated black suit, wide brimmed black hat, hurried through the lobby looking like what a Senator's supposed to look like. Upstairs Senator Alben Barkley surrounded by a group of eager sycophants eased through the third-floor corridor shaking hands interminably, fussing humorously about his television appearance, "what shall I wear—they tell me you look like a corpse in a white suit but I've got the finest fitting white suit you ever saw—otherwise I've only got this ittybitty gray striped suit and it looks hot." "Are you going to put on makeup?" we asked. "Sure, —olive oil, purple grease on my lips, everything they have." The Senator sailed on.

Over in Leslie Biffle's inner office his direct White House line was kept busy—Senator O'Mahoney, Number One Vice Presidential candidate, his tufty eyebrows glistening with sweat, chatted with a few pressmen. Outside three Washington delegates strolled arm in arm with rolled brim green fedoras on their heads banded in white printed "Washington the Evergreen State." Made by the Penney Hat Co., 72 of the fancy lids had been shipped to Seattle for the 58 delegates. "Twelve were swiped before we left," mourned a chubby delegate, "I have to keep the string under my chin otherwise some dame will grab it."

The young Democrats, an energetic lot have their own special buttons, "All 48 in '48," with campaign money hard to raise the ladies have a smart new dodge—a screw-top bottle, a cavorting donkey attached to its pierced lid, and labelled "Give—Cash and Carry '48—Money talks, let yours speak up for democracy on September twenty-seventh, Democratic women's day."

Fat Girl Floor Show

AT DINNER HOUR Attorney General Tom Clark, his pretty wife with a party of friends downed steaks at the Vesper, Philadelphia's equivalent to New York's Twenty-one. Solicitor General Philip Perlman was there, too. Later at the CR Club, the gaudiest of local night clubs, the bar was ringed with Washington's snappier correspondents while at the most conspicuous table surrounded by New Mexico delegates, sat former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson. Part of the floor show featured a trio of fat girls all over 250 pounds on the hoof who danced with considerable agility. Impromptu program number was when an Hawaiian delegate in flapping sport shirt stepped mikewards, joined the singer in a Hawaiian song.

Hot spot was the Benjamin Franklin Hotel where the riproaring California delegation holed in—they caucused all Saturday afternoon locked in Room 456—windows were kept closed, doors guarded to keep snarls and roars from reaching reporters, and cameramen bivouaced listlessly in the adjoining corridors. After a couple hours incarceration a case of whisky was whisked by the guards, "Now I guess they'll be in there all night," growled a lens laddie.

Helen Gahagan Douglas slipped out early, went upstairs to work on the speech she is to deliver before the convention La Douglas, the Democrats' equivalent, perhaps superior, to the Republicans' La Luce, spent all Sunday polishing her chef doeuvre. Upstairs Mrs. James Roosevelt waited out the caucus—we dropped in a moment, found her shorter, darker, prettier than her photographs, younger, too, in a simply cut blue plaid gingham.

Back in the Bellevue Stratford the women's division readying for their official opening had transferred the burgundy room, old Stassen headquarters, filling it with potted palms, gaily cushioned redwood furniture, air cooling yellow and white striped awnings, between the tall pillars, just to make it more cosy. Not a giveaway in sight but refreshments at the opening and a mammoth picture of President Truman, "the only guy who is smiling around here," tartly remarked a local sour puss—not without reason.

Memorial Breakfast

LESS PUBLICIZED events on the convention agenda include a tea given for Mrs. William H. Good of New York, who is one of the veteran national committeewomen, and on Tuesday the memorial breakfast given at every Democratic convention to honor the late William Jennings Bryan. This year Josephus Daniels and Franklin Delano Rosevelt have been added to the memorial roster.

The three women who will address the convention are Miss Frances Perkins, former Secretary of Labor, Mrs. India Edwards and Congresswoman Helen Gahagen Douglas. India Edwards, and presumably the others, have been noting Republican convention effects with an observant eye. Taking no chances on looking like corpses, they'll be made up to suit the screen by a minion of Hollywood disguiser Max Factor. The makeup gent is kept in mysterious purdah in a hotel bedroom from which he emerges only to work his extraordinary facial alchemy. Yep, the Democrats have benefited by their convention predecessors in every way except one.

MISS PHYLLIS DONALD
. . . she's engaged

Miss Donald Is Engaged

Mrs. Bertram Groesbeck of Arlington, Va., entertained at tea yesterday at the Two Scott Circle Club here to announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Phyllis Donald, to Lieut. Warren Chestnutt son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Chestnutt of Washington.

Miss Donald is the daughter of Adam Donald of Philadelphia, and a stepsister of Admiral Bertram Groesbeck, jr. She is a graduate of Centenary Junior College, Hackettstown, N. J.

For the party yesterday Miss Donald wore a gown of toast lace made with off-the-shoulder neckline and ballerina skirt. On view at the tea was a portrait of the bride-elect, just completed by the Washington artist, Mildred Brown.

Receiving with Mrs. Groesbeck and her daughter were Mr. and Mrs. Chestnutt, parents of the prospective bridegroom.

Lieutenant Chestnutt, now stationed with the Air Corps on Guam, will return to this country late in August when the wedding will take place. He was recently in Yokohama where he studied at the Keio University.

Here from out of town were Miss Virginia Dunbar of Houston, Tex., sister of Mrs. Groesbeck, and Miss Ann Meadows and Cyrus Gambrill of Frederick, Md.

Marcella Kelley, Henry B. Brown, Jr. To Be Married

Representative and Mrs. Augustine B. Kelley of Greensburg, Pa., and Kenwood, Md., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Marcella Maria, to Henry B. Brown, jr. of Chicago. The wedding will take place September 25.

Miss Kelley was graduated from Trinity College, Washington. Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Brown of Charlestown, Ind. He is a graduate of the University of Colorado. He is now with the public relations staff of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Visiting Newport

Charles C. Adams, jr. and his sister, Mrs. Adams Bunn, have flown to Newport, R. I., to visit Mrs. Carl Jurgen at her estate, Shady Lawn. Mrs. Jurgen was the former Miss Marion Wilson.

MRS. IRWIN HAZARD
. . . Virginia honeymoon

Hazard—Soghigian

Miss Margaret Soghigian, daughter of Mrs. Kevont Bajoian, and the late Samuel Soghigian, became the bride yesterday of Irwin Hazard, son of Mrs. R. Hartley Hazard. The ceremony was performed in the Grace Lutheran Church, the Rev. G. E. Lenski officiating.

Given in marriage by Kevont Bajoian, the bride wore a gown of cream brocade satin and carried a bouquet of white roses centered with an orchid. Her shoulder length veil was held by a juliet cap.

Mrs. George Sharigan attended her sister as matron of honor. Gerald P. Nye, former Senator from North Dakota, served as best man and Harry Soghigian was the usher.

Following the reception the couple left for a weding trip to Virginia where they will stay for the summer. On their return they will reside in Washington.

Adelson—Kerner

Miss Alma Kerner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kerner, and Max Adelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adelson, were married yesterday in the Beth Sholom Temple. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Harry J. Kauffman, assisted by Cantor Solomon Katz, Rabbi Sidney Shulman and Rabbi Aaron Gorbatty of New Jersey.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown and carried an arm bouquet of white roses, gladioli and gardenias.

Miss Shirley Kerner was maid of honor for her sister and Harry Adelson served his brother as best man. The ushers were Norton Banner, Harry Draizen, Sidney Draizen, Leonard Herson, Harold Shulman, Ralph Lamb, Myer Spitulnik and Paul Weinstein.

Following a wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec, the couple will reside in Brentwood Village.

Eister—Ford

Miss Margaret Morrow Ford, daughter of Mrs James Ford and the late Prof. Ford of Harvard University, became the bride July 5 of William Albert Eister, son of Mrs. John S. A. Fi[illegible] of Sunbury, Pa., and the late Mr Eister, in All Soul's Unitarian Church in Washington.

The bride wore a white embroidered organdy gown and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses. Miss Lyda McGloghlin was the maid of honor. Seymour West served as best man and Frederick McKay was usher.

Following the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to Maine. On their return they will reside at 1543 Chapin st. nw.

Bergmann—Baker

Miss Betty Frances Baker, daughter of Mrs. Melvin A. Baker of Hyattsville, and the late Rev. Baker, became the bride of Donald Atlee Bergmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bergmann, also of Hyattsville, at the Hyattsville First Methodist Church July 10, the Rev. Edgar W. Beckett officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, James M. Baker, wore a gown of white marquisette with a finger-tip veil. Mrs. George P. Riggin, jr., was the matron of honor and Miss Carol Jean Baker was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Doris Bergmann, Miss Theresa Boyle, Miss Frances Flanders and Mrs. Loring Boyce.

George P. Riggin, jr., was best man and the ushers were Rudolph Bergmann, John Bergmann, Milton Bergmann, Robert Wilson and Leonard Desmond.

A reception followed the ceremony at the church. After a wedding trip the couple will reside in Hyattsville.

Benefit Garden Party Held At Home of Marquis Childs

Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Ch[illegible] opened the garden of their Che[illegible] Chase, Md., home yesterday for a garden party sponsored by the Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic [illegible]tion.

Games and cool refreshments were on the program and there was entertainment by the noted Negro choir, the Musical Arts Choir, and Junita Russell, brilliant concert pianist.

Outstanding among the guests were Mme. Eugenie Leontovitsh and Jose Ferrar who will appear next week in "Twentieth Century" at the Olney Theater.

The Musical Arts Choir was founded by Othello Wilson to promote better race relations and to provide financial assistance to the Oak Hill Training School, Masseys, Va., where Mr. Wilson was formerly principal. The choir has taken to provide a scholar[illegible]ip every year for 20 years to the outstanding student of the school and to build a recreation center there. The singers have appeared at Carnegie Hall, International House and many colleges and churches in the South and East.

It aims to keep alive the Negro folk song which it feels makes a real contribution to American musical art.

Improving the Flavor

To make the flavor of canned citrus juice more like that of fresh juice many housewives have learned the simple device of pouring the chilled juice back and forth from one glass to another just before serving.

This puts back into the juice the air which was removed during vacuum canning. Labels on some cans of citrus juice now carry this suggestion. Adding air this way should never be done in advance but always just before serving and with well chilled juice. Otherwise, the added air will have time to affect the C in the juice by oxidation and thus destroys some of its important nutritive value and its fine flavor as well.

Because oxidation goes slower in the cold and also because cold juice absorbs air more readily, scientists advise always having the juice chilled befor pouring it back and forth.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Matron, Visiting States, Declines to See Her Mother, Famous Careerist, Who Sent Daughter to Aunt's Care in Ireland Years Ago

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When I was about a year old, my father died, leaving little money. Mother sent me to live with an aunt in Dublin while she remained in the States to work.

At first she couldn't afford either to come to Ireland to visit or to send for me, but after several years she was making a great deal of money as an established interior decorator. She sent me to one of the best schools in England, gave me wonderful clothes and plenty of pocket money, but never tried to see me or have me visit her.

When I finished school, she settled a monthly allowance on me, a fabulous amount for an 18-year-old; but shortly before war broke, when my aunt suggested it might be safer for me to come to America, mother wrote that she preferred me to stay where I was. A few months later she married a man of considerable means. The following year, when I married a young American serving in the RAF, she sent a large cheque but no word of congratulation.

Seems the Aunt
Has Girl by Ear

MY HUSBAND and I settled in England after the war, but this past year we came to the States for a visit with his parents, and soon after arrival we heard that my step-father had just died. We sent flowers but didn't attend the funeral and a week later I had a nasty letter from mother, berating me for not coming. I sent a note saying it was impossible, which ended our correspondence.

My husband and I are returning to England soon, and my aunt writes that mother is very bitter because I haven't visited her. She tells my aunt that she considers me a very ungrateful daughter and feels it is my duty to visit her before we go.

I have no desire to see her. She hasn't treated me as she should, and I see no reason to make a special trip to the West Coast (thus upsetting our plans) to see her. The affection I would have for a mother is given to my aunt, who has cared for me all these years. Maybe my attitude is all wrong, but I can't help my resentful feelings. What do you think? C. C.

Girl's Attitude
Is Subtly Biased

DEAR C. C.: So much hostility towards a mother one can't remember having seen or known isn't natural.

In general, the child who grows up without conscious recollection of his blood mother tends to yearn always for first-hand knowledge of her, and to encow her in fantasy with tenderest attributes,—the more so if the circumstances of his actual rearing leave him rather heart-starved.

Thus I infer that somebody's fine Spencerian hand has been at work here, subtly poisoning your feelings about your mother for years and years. Whose? Your aunt's, maybe?

It is not uncommon for a woman who acts as foster-mother to somebody else's child to become so attached to her charge that she begins (consciously or unconsciously) to connive, in overtly trustworthy-seeming ways, to prevent permanent satisfactory reunion of mother and child.

Mother Engineered
Girl's Safekeeping

SO THAT'S ONE thought that occurs to me, as I ponder your attitude. My next thought is that Lincoln's tribute to his mother likewise applies to your life-experience.

All that you are or hope to be you owe in large measure to your mother's enterprise, which packed you off to old-country sanctuary and an old-fashioned rearing, as she rolled up her sleeves and went to work in an alien land to create the success that earned the money which has given you the cheeky complacency that is yours today.

For advice: Go see your mother, with mind open to the possibility that you've wronged her in thought for 20-odd years; and even if you find her hard-bitten and hopelessly uncongenial, be gracious, flexible and magnanimous while there, as befits the "gentle lady" training she wangled for you. M. H.

Baby Needs Few Clothes On Hot Days

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

This is the time of year when it is more important to keep the baby cool than to worry about clothing. It is so traditional to wrap the baby up snugly when he is tiny that mothers take off clothes with reluctance and some fear. They are sure that he'll catch cold if his tummy isn't covered.

Well, who catches cold when the temperature is in the high eighties or nineties? That's the time to prevent excessive perspiration; which irritates the baby's skin and causes a prickly heat rash. And being warm and uncomfortable prevents the baby from sleeping both day and night, which is none too good for his digestive capacities.

Keep him cool by putting on the minimum of clothing. That, in most cases, will be just a diaper. Keep him dressed—or undressed—this way day and night. If it turns cool, put on a light cotton shirt or throw a cotton blanket over him.

During the heat of the day and before the baby goes to bed at night, sponge him off with tepid water. It will lower the temperature of his skin, make him feel cool and send him off to sleep more quickly. It doesn't make much difference if he has two or three of these quick sponges a day, he'll be just as appreciative of them as you are of a cool shower.

Give the baby lots of cool water to drink between meals. Even if he has never "cared much" for water, he'll enjoy it and want it when the temperature is high. Boil the water and keep it in a sterilized glass jar with tight lid. Keep it in a cool place but not in the icebox. And don't ply the baby with iced, soft drinks. The water is more satisfying to his thirst, he doesn't need all the flavors and sugars and the bubbles in soft drinks. They fill him with gas and spoil his appetite for the foods he does need.

If he is indifferent to his meals on hot days don't force him to eat. He knows best what his stomach can take. No one can eat the same amount of food when the temperature is soaring. Give him more water to drink. Shake the bottle of formula, pour off one fourth and fill it up with boiled water. This will give him the fluids he needs without burdening his stomach with nourishment. He'll make it up when the weather turns cool.

Need Any Coat Hangers?

Is there any place in Washington or vicinity that will buy wire coat hangers? I have quite a lot of them and feel some place might be glad to get them at a reasonable price. They are in new condition. B. K. W.

Occasionally dry cleaning establishments will buy wire hangers.

We have a glass brick which we would like to convert into a lamp. Can we do it ourselves, and if so, how? If not, can you suggest a place where it could be done reasonably? S. K.

I think you'd be wise to take this job to a professional. A lamp firm which can be reached by calling National 0140 does this type of work.

Can you tell me the name of a laundry, or other place, in Washington, where I can have crocheted table mats washed, starched, and stretched? I have lived here four months and have been unable to find such a place. One laundry said they could do them and then returned them limp and unstretched. A. H. L.

A hand laundry on 12th st. does this sort of work. It can be reached by calling Dupont 7700.

I have several individual pearls which I believe to be of value. Can you tell me where I could have them appraised? What is the usual fee for such work? L. E. C.

Look under "Appraisers" in the yellow pages of the directory for a firm which will evaluate your pearls. The usual fee for such services is 1 per cent of the appraised value or a minimum of $2.

Can you help us locate three panes of hand-blown bottle glass, bull's eye glass, to be cut to fit openings measuring 7¼x9 inches? P. B.

Bull's eye glass is an important spun glass which is made in round pieces. There is an art leaded glass studio in the city which sells it, but has it only in small pieces—3, 4, and 5 inches in diameter. In discussing your problem, a representative of this firm said that glass was used 30 or 40 years ago in windows and doors, but because of the way it was spun, it created a fire hazard when used where the sun touched it. Just as a fire can be kindled by holding a magnifying glass at the right angle over a piece of paper, this glass would set drapes or other nearby inflammable material on fire.

An importer of this glass is Leo Popper & Sons, 143-147 Franklin st., New York City. I would suggest you write to this concern for information about it. I am told that if the glass can be obtained in this country, this firm will have it.

Can seldom used sterling silver pieces (I'm thinking particularly of a set of glass and sterling coasters) be waxed to prevent tarnish? M. B. L.

Applying clear lacquer to the silver after it has been polished is the surest way to prevent tarnish. However, with pieces which are both glass and silver, it is often difficult to apply it to only the silver parts. Then, too, it must be renewed whenever the film is broken. There are liquid products on the market which can be applied to the silver to retard tarnish. These have to be renewed each time the silver is washed. They are for sale at some department stores and jewelry stores. Another excellent way to retard tarnish is to wrap the newly polished pieces in cloths which have been especially treated to prevent tarnish. They can be purchased where silver polishes are sold.

How can you keep white curtains white? I think I read somewhere that permanently finished organdy must not be bleached. Yet my white ruffled curtains have a definite yellowed line at sill height. I wash them in my automatic washer, using bluing flakes and hot water. I also starch them. They are beautiful for about a week, then they are limp and less than snow white. M. B. L.

It is true that household bleach removes the permanent stiff finish from curtains. However, since you starch them anyway, I see no reason why you should not use a bit of bleach to remove the yellow line at the sill. It seems there is no other way to make them really snowy white. It probably won't take much.

As for keeping them white, the only way is frequent washings. High humidity weather causes them to become limp quickly and, of course, when they lose their stiffness they more readily absorb dirt. Have you ever considered not using the white curtains during these hot, humid months? That would certainly prolong the life of the curtains for they must be laundered so frequently in summer to keep them looking well.

Pix First-Run Has No 'Scandal'

By Richard L. Coe

EVERY SO OFTEN the Pix, that stamping ground of the lurid double bills, surprises everyone, including itself, by coming up with a first-run film, a picture that hasn't already played the downtown or neighborhood houses.

It has two such at the moment and if one were of a mind to note alliances, United Artists seems to have a role in all this. Both current pictures, "A Scandal in Paris" and "Who Killed Doc. Robbin?" are U. A. releases and another from the same firm is due in Friday, "Fun on a Weekend," with Eddie Bracken and Priscilla Lane.

Neither "A Scandal in Paris" or "Who Killed Doc. Robbin?" are anything sensational, to put it kindly, which probably is why they never got a look-in at the more lavish palaces.

"A Scandal in Paris," as a matter of fact, must have posed such a problem for attracting audiences that United Artists just gave up. There's nothing scandalous about the picture (which first appeared in July, 1946) and most of the action happens in the environs of the city, as the guidebook maps put it.

With George Sanders in the leading role, this is an Arnold Pressburger film based on the life of Eugene-Francois Vidocq, who reformed himself from a criminal into an active champion of the law. Those were the days of colorful behavior on the part of the French upper crust and George's theory about lifting precious gems from ladies, old and young, gives him a pleasant living. But in time he becomes entranced with Signe Hasso, reforms and writes of his criminal doings.

What was needed in this rather pallid piece was a style which the Pressburger firm didn't manage to capture. Period costumes, a trained monkey, the efforts of Miss Hasso, the late Carole Landis, the urbane Alma Kruger, the blustery Gene Lockhart and the wily Akim Tamiroff haven't pulled the trick. Sanders is his usual heavy self and one is inclined to marvel at the temerity of producers to insist on casting him as a rollicking gay blade. It's reminiscent of the pall he cast over "The Affairs of Bel Ami."

"Who Killed Doc. Robbin?" is Hal Roach bringing a pack of terrified kiddies through a house of crime. It's much in the spirit of those Our Gang comedies he was so successful with years ago. This time the youngsters are doused in a completely bleary color process. Somehow whisking the kids around with a terrifying ape doesn't strike me as good stuff for the youngsters. It's an hour of low-level silliness.

JOSE FERRER, bless his soul, is going to make merry once again with "Charlie's Aunt" . . . This will go on the week beginning Tuesday the 27th at Olney . . . As we recalled a few days back, Ferrer's stardom on Broadway came from his bright fun-making in the old comedy, as revived eight years ago by Day Tuttle and Dick Skinner, who's now the Olney's general manager . . . After devoting himself to "Otello," "Cyrano" and the labors of starting New York's City Center rep, Ferrer is in for a few weeks of fun . . . Tuesday night he joins Eugenie Leontovich in the Hecht-MacArthur comedy, "Twentieth Century."

"EASTER PARADE" has inspired another contest as well as thoughts that you can have springtime in July . . . The Irving Berlin film's costumes are now on display at the Emily Shop, next door to the Palace, where the musical opens Thursday . . . The contest, offering cash and guest tickets, is for those who feel they're up to sketching Irene's costumes as they sit in the F st. window . . . Or had you noticed that window display, too?

TONIGHT: "Oklahoma!" arrives at the National with the company that recently closed the record-smashing New York run.

American Jets Now Believed Equal to Any

By The Associated Press

The United States now has jet warplane engines equal to or more powerful than any, defense officials believe.

In making this estimate for a reporter yesterday, experts of the committee on aeronautics of the Research and Development Board pointed out that in 1946 it was publicly estimated the British were two years ahead of the United States in jet propulsion power plants.

However, British designs still have the ability to get greater distance, committee experts indicate. This limitation on range has bothered jet designers of all nations. Jet planes go fast but not far.

Situation Summed Up

Defense Department authorities summed up the present situation about like this:

Increased effort in the United States since 1946 has improved American jet power plants materially. In the fields of turbo-jet (the most commonly known jet engine used in fighter and bomber planes), rocket (such as is used in the XS-1 supersonic experimental plane), pulse-jet and ram-jet (used in some guided missiles and unmanned experimental aircraft) the United States is "believed now to have power units equivalent to or better than those of any other nation."

But, say the experts, British jet engines still show better fuel economy than those of the United States. Intensified study of fuel combustion in jets must be made to improve the efficiency of American design.

Engine Thrusts Compared

While the aeronautics experts did not discuss individual designs, a contributing reason for the better fuel efficiency of the British engines may be the lower power. The De Haviland Goblin engines used in the Vampire jet fighters of the Royal Air Force are understood to have a thrust of about 3500 pounds; the Rolls Royce Derwent V, used in the meteor jet fighter, about 3000 pounds.

On the other hand, the F-80C Lockheed jet fighter of the United States air force, powered with an Allison model 400 engine, develops 4600 pounds thrust. And a jet plant with a thrust rated at about 5000 pounds, the General Electric TG-190A, is being mounted in a radically designed fighter with swept-back wings, the North American F-86A.

Model Engineers to Meet

The Metropolitan Society of Model Engineers will meet at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Room 457, Union Station. Awards will be made to those who have done outstanding work, and locomotives and cars on a scale model under construction will be operated.

Wood Mosaics Yield Lawyer $50,000 a Year

By John London
Post Reporter

Meet James Mason, jr., 49, artistic alchemist, who transforms wood slivers into portrait curios for collectors—and gold chips for his own bank account.

Mason, a lawyer by training, a businessman by trade, and an artist by instinct, has developed a unique craft—mosaic portraits, composed of thousands of inlaid chips of vari-colored wood.

His handiwork, lauded by creative circles as a brilliant revival of an all but vanished art form, is burgeoning into a thriving enterprise, good for more than $50,000 a year.

Resembles Willkie

Currently Mason, who resembles the late Wendell Willkie, is asking $150,000 for his wood chip portraits of 32 Presidents, each 19 by 24 inches, each composed of more than 500,000 splinters. The coloring is natural, provided by varied hues of some 200 different types of wood, explains Mason. A native of Durham, N. C., and resident of Nashville, Tenn., he is visiting Washington to see friends and art experts.

To develop his exacting art medium, Mason has devoted some 14 years to study of woods, creation of special tools and painstaking experimentation.

His technique involves what he calls "the swirl and block." A swirl mosaic, he says, "is made up of cross grain wood slivers, so arranged that the wood will catch the reflection of light."

"Then I use a block mosaic, a combination of similar grains, so that the viewer's attention will be guided to the swirl, where the artist wants to focus emphasis."

His Big Problem

Mason's big problem was to figure out how to make a flat surface look dimensional, and sculptured.

"First I tried hair-line step-offs in shadings, by juxtaposing slivers of different colored woods," he recalls; "but the pictures still looked flat."

His solution was to inlay wood slivers into other slivers — knife away some of the darker wood and refill it with lighter shaded wood.

JAMES MASON AND WOOD MOSAIC PORTRAIT

. . . 500,000 pieces make Gov. Cherry of North Carolina

First step in building a portrait is a study of the subject's photograph, and planning of a color chart. Green shades are derived from poplar wood, pink from the tulip tree, gold from the hedge apple tree, vermillion from the vermillion tree, for example. Walnut alone ranges through some 50 different colors, depending on how far from the core of the tree the wood is taken, he has discovered.

Wood Cutting Technique

He cuts the various woods into one eighth of an inch thicknesses, ranging in size from needle point to one fourth of an inch square. Each tiny inlay is cut and recut, then chiselled into a store-bought wood backing, fixed with transparent cement and shellacked.

The process, involving the use of some 15 self-devised instruments, resembles dental tools, requires weeks of diligence—and the aid of four assistants.

Blue is the only color stumbling block Mason hasn't solved. He points out:

"You can only find blue, ironically, in red oak—and that's false coloring, caused, I think, by air striking the wood. The color won't stand up like my others do."

So for blue eyes, he inlays white woods, like holly, into light wood such as pale walnut.

Peacock proud of his colorful craft, Mason, though fond of oil painting, maintains true colors exist only in woods.

"God created trees and He created colors in oils, but the trees drink the colors of light deeper than oils," he believes. "Then, too, natural wood colors grow richer in shading as they age with the years."

Busy Beaver Gets Even For Loss of Sticks

Newburgh, N. Y. (U.P.)—John Orth, director of the Trailside Museum at Bear Mountain, tells a tory about a beaver and some boys.

Each night the beaver deposited a pile of sticks on a lake dock near a boys' camp he relates. Each morning, the boys used the sticks for their camp fires.

That went on for some time, until one morning the boys looked for the expected pile of sticks, only to find their dock floating out in the lake.

The beaver took his revenge by gnawing away the pilings under the dock.

Navy Tests Find No Ill Effects Of Jet Noises on Human Ear

By The Associated Press

The Navy has tested the noise of a jet engine on human beings and found no "outstanding ill effects."

The results are too meager to predict "complete harmlessness for all types of jet engines under varying conditions," the announcement said.

Ten Navy volunteers cocked their ears one or two hours a day for a total of 15 hours. They listened to an old-style jet at the Aero Medical Equipment Laboratory at Philadelphia. Most of the time they wore helmets or springband headphones, double kapok-filled ear "doughnuts" and cotton ear plugs.

They were unharmed, the Navy reported, although after one 15-minute test without the padding none could hear clarly for several minutes.

Seven of the group tested reported they were more tired than ordinarily and 5 lost from 5 to 19 pounds.

Workmen in the jet shops have blamed the supersonic jet noise for minor stomachaches and toothaches, the Navy said. But "they complain more about the noise and vibration of powerful reciprocating engines," it added.

Navy experts concluded that ultrahigh frequency sound damages some animal tissues, but ill effects to human tissues appear "unlikely unless the frequency is extremely high." They did not specify how high this is.

50,000 Reds Open Drive in Central China

Nanking, July 11 (AP).—Progovernment Chinese sources said today 50,000 Communists had started a "general offensive" in Hupeh Province of Central China.

This word came as the government still was reporting on a "sweeping victory" over the Communists in Honan Province some 250 to 300 miles to the northeast.

The new Red drive was said to be in the triangle between the Yangtze and Han Rivers.

Progovernment dispatches said national warplanes had stalled a large Communist force on the north bank of the Han. The unopposed airforce also was credited with wide offensive patrols over the Yangtze and Yellow Rivers in efforts to block Red movements.

Neutral observers said it was still too early to determine the extent of the government's victory in Honan. It appeared that the drive had accomplished little more than to scatter the Communists.

Communists in Mufti Rob Kwangtung Banks

Canton, China, July 11 (AP).—A thousand bandits robbed two banks in Changkiang on the Kwangtung Province south coast and fought a five-hour battle with provincial troops before retiring, the independent paper "Great Light" said today.

The newspaper said the bandits distributed Communist leaflets during the raid and identified themselves as members of the Communist army, but wore plain clothes.

Estimates of the loot varied, the highest totaling about $6000 (U. S.) in Chinese and Hong Kong currency.

Youth Seriously Injured Diving

Lloyd Hyde, 21, of 3331 Rittenhouse st. nw., was injured critically yesterday when he dove from a pier at North Beach, Md., into shallow water.

The youth was taken to Calvert County Hospital at Prince Frederick by the Hutchins Funeral Home ambulance. Emergency examination indicated a possible neck fracture, according to Dr. George Weems, attending physician.

Navy Veteran Suicide

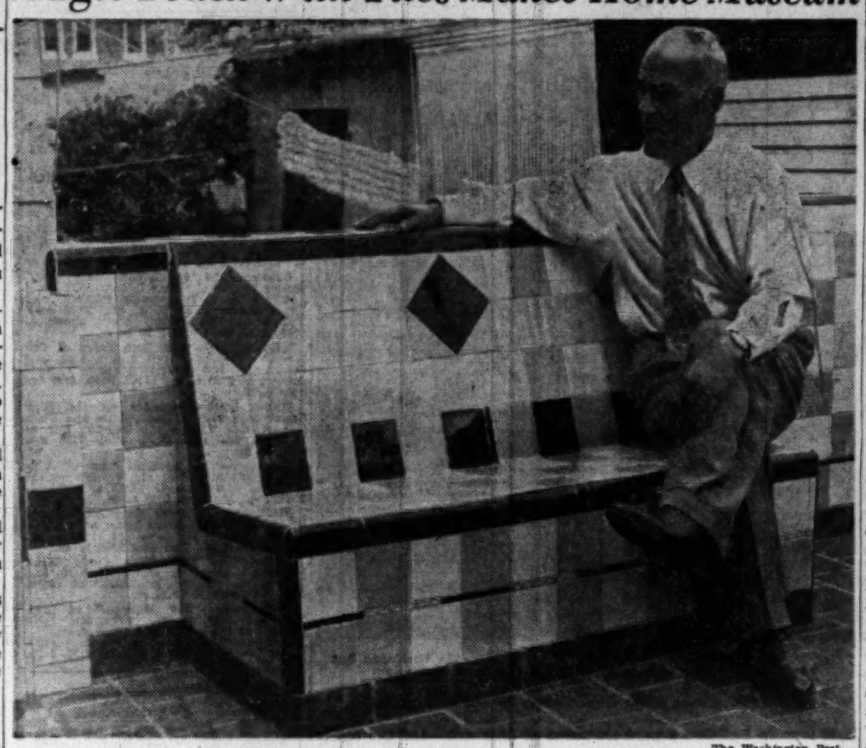
Magic Touch With Tiles Makes Home Museum



The Washington Post

HIS PRIDE—Luigi Celia looks at and enjoys the pride of his spare-time hobby—tile setting. This tile bench in the back of his home at 4619 9th st. nw., was built over an old wooden bench. Even the clothes poles in the yard are tiled over

The creative impulse of a little Italian-born workman has converted a plain brick rowhouse, at 4619 9th st. nw., into virtually a museum of tile.

Gleeful and proud as a boy, Luigi Celia, 56, yesterday conducted a reporter and photographer on a tour of the premises pausing frequently to exhibit his handiwork.

"It was a wooden bench," he said, "just a plain old wooden bench." The sightseers saw a gleaming graceful sitting place—covered with pink, beige, blue and shiny black tiles, all trim and regular.

In the garden, too, was a tile-covered clothes pole in pastels, a tile-ornamented base to hold the garbage pail and tile paneling of sky blue, rose and biege trimmed in black.

But that was hardly all.

White tile covered the kitchen sink, floated over the walls, and led into the basement. The staircase entering the basement, the side walls, the area under the staircase was covered with brightly colored tile blocks.

The basement itself boasted, from wall to wall, rose and white tile coverings, offset by medallions in other shadees.

"Nobody gave me the idea," Celia said. "I just lay them all down on the floor—the designs, I mean, and then decide which to pick . . . I don't want anybody to take the blame if it doesn't look good."

Celia also showed off a bathtub all covered with tile, a store room and a dinette, tile-tinted lime (it was once an open porch).

He said the project took him about 3½ years and cost an estimated $7000. "But I like it . . . I enjoy it," he said.

And your friends, do they like it? he was asked. At that the stocky former Italian farmer broke into a wide grin and blurted:

"Like it—you imagine—you imagine!"

Celia's fulltime job is operating a machine that polishes and cleans marble for the Columbia Mosaic Co. His afterwork activity, as is obvious, consists of tiling, tiling and more tiling.

NLRB Declares Union Guilty of Using Boycott

By the United Press

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board ruled Saturday that the AFL Bricklayers Union violated the Taft-Hartley law by engaging in a secondary boycott in connection with the erection of the Grand Rapids, Mich., Christian High School.

Examiner William F. Scharnikow rejected union arguments that the school construction was not interstate commerce, and that the Taft-Hartley ban on secondary boycotts is unconstitutional.

He found that the Grand Rapids local of the bricklayers and its president, Douglas F. Behrens, illegally ordered members Anthony Pontello and Louis Austhof to stop working for the Grand Rapids Tile and Mosaic Co. on the school project.

Scharnikow said the purpose was the illegal objective of forcing the company to cease doing business with Osterink Construction Co., general contractor for the school. Osterink was on the "unfair" list of the union and of the Grand Rapids Building and Construction Trades Council (AFL).

St. Elizabeths Patient Declared a Suicide

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide yesterday in the death Friday of Mrs. Gladys Williams, 49, a St. Elizabeths Hospital patient.

She was found with the strings of her jacket knotted around her throat. She had been in the hospital since 1946.

Four Nations To Establish Economic Pact

Mexico City, July 11 (U.P.).—Colombia, Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela are on the verge of setting up an economic union that will bring them "industrial independence," Ecuadorean Ambassador Alberto Puig Arosemena said today.

The four nations which once formed a single republic, will hold a conference at Quito, Ecuador, beginning July 24 to adopt final plans for the union.

This will be based chiefly on abolition of tariff barriers to form a customs union, the ambassador said.

A preliminary conference, held at Quito May 24 to June 5, drew up an agenda calling for complete unification by the four countries on all economic matters, including an eventual "common currency." The door was left open for other Latin American countries to join, Puig said.

Approval by the forthcoming conference of the plan, known as the "Quito Charter," would initiate a five-year interim period during which some tariffs would be abolished immediately and others would be reduced gradually until done away with.

Tariffs on goods imported from countries outside the four-nation union would not be altered.

Eye Specialists Warned to File Answers to Suits

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—notices will be sent out soon to some 2700 eye specialists named defendants in the Government's antitrust suits against two big optical companies, a Government spokesman said today.

The notices will inform them, he said, that they must file answers to the Government's charges in Federal Court here within 30 days after receiving the notices or their inaction will be considered to bind them to accept the verdict of the court in the cases.

A hearing on the Government's suit against Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., three subsidiaries and some 1200 eye specialists, has been set for October 18 in the court of Federal Judge Walter J. La Buy.

No hearing date has been set for the suit against American Optical Co. of Southbridge, Mass., and some 1500 doctors.

The doctors are accused of accepting rebates from the companies for glasses which they prescribed for customers.

American Legion Boy Forum Slated Here for July 30

By The Associated Press

Ninety-six high school students from throughout the Nation will convene here July 30 for the annual boys forum of national government, sponsored by the American Legion.

The forum is a citizenship program designed to give outstanding students an insight into the operations of Federal Government.

While in Washington, the youths will be received by President Truman and Cabinet officers, hold simulated legislative and political sessions and elect a boy president. Forum headquarters will be at American University.

150 War-Mutilated Children Visit Pope

Rome, Italy, July 11 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII received 150 war-mutilated children in an audience today and prayed for continued efforts to aid suffering children.

Most of the children lost legs, arms or hands in war incidents.

The pontiff recalled the love of Christ for infants and expressed the certainty that "generous spirits will never be lacking so these children can be given lives of work and serenity."

New York Man Killed As Glider Crashes

Elmira, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—William Mayfield, 34, of Port Jervis, N. Y., was killed today when his glider crashed into a hillside in a takeoff.

Mayfield was a crew member for Steve Bennis of Sanford, Fla., a contestant in the fifteenth national soaring contest which ended here today. Mayfield's flight was not part of the contest.

Turks Arrest Four Fleeing Bulgaria

Istanbul, July 11 (U.P.).—Turkish authorities said today they had arrested four of the six anti-Communists who arrived from Bulgaria June 30 in a Junkers plane with two dead crew members aboard.

Two of the four will be charged with murder and tried in Turkish courts, it was reported. The other two will be charged as accomplices.

Bulgaria has demanded all six be returned to Bulgaria for trial.

CORRECTION

In reporting election of two Washington educators to office in national associations yesterday, The Washington Post erroneously stated that the American Federation of Teachers convention was held in Cleveland.

The AFT convention, at which Miss Selma M. Borchardt was renamed vice president, was held in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The National Education Association convention, at which Harold A. Allan was elected to the board of trustees, was held in Cleveland. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Army Authorizes 10,630-Foot Span At Grey's Point

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—A permit has been received from the Army's corps of engineers authorizing construction of a bridge over the Rappahannock River at Grey's Point, Highway Commissioner James A. Anderson announced yesterday.

The permit requires a 300-foot horizontal clearance and a 100-foot vertical clearance. Plans call for a span 10,630 feet long. This would make the bridge the longest in the Highway Department's system, and second in length in the State only to the James River Bridge above Newport News. More than a mile of the bridge will stretch over water some 60 feet deep.

The Grey's Point-White Stone Bridge will replace an existing ferry service linking the Northern Neck with the York Peninsula and other parts of Tidewater Virginia. Its cost will be included in a single bond issue of some 20 million dollars.

American Convicted In Japan Black Mart

Yokohama, Japan, July 11 (U.P.).—First Lieut. Cesare A. Bucci, Schenectady, N. Y., has been convicted by an Army court-martial of operating a big black market here in American cigarettes and Japanese yen.

Bucci, post exchange manager and civilian exchange officer for an Army signal battalion, was tried on eight charges and found guilty on six. He was ordered dishonorably dismissed from the service and fined $1000.

Death Sentence Given Poland War Primier

Warsaw, Poland, July 11 (U.P.).—Joseph Buhler, former premier of the German "general government" in Poland, was sentenced to death today by the Supreme National Court at Krakow.

Buhler was convicted of crimes against humanity in signing death warrants for hundreds of thousands of Poles and Jews, and other war crimes.

MARY WORTH

WHILE VISITING OLD FRIENDS IN WASHINGTON, MARY WORTH HAS RECEIVED A BELATED LETTER WHICH WILL GIVE A HIGHLY UNEXPECTED TURN TO HER LIFE!
HOW STUPID OF ME, AUNT MARY! CARRYING THAT AROUND ALL THESE WEEKS!
IS IT BAD NEWS?
I'M NOT SURE!
Dear Aunt Mary: You never did reply to little Donna's birth announcement. I suppose it was lost in the mail. For your enlightenment and amusement, it said: MICHAEL AND "BRICK" MASON ANNOUNCE THE PUBLICATION OF THEIR FIRST ADDITION, "DONNA" ...One of those things... It seemed very clever at the time. But, about my reason for writing you.... we came to California, you know.
after the trouble. And I've been handling publicity accounts at home. Now.. here's the clutch, as Mike used to say.
I've been offered a movie writing contract this fall.. at money enough to make a Maharajah drool. But I'll not take it unless you'll come out for the winter and look after Donna. Both the cash and my gratitude will be boundless. Please write and say you'll come out here in about two or months will be soon enough to not due to b work at studio around Nov. 1. With much love, Brick
READ IT, LEONA! WHAT IT SAYS IS GOOD! BUT WHAT IT LEAVES UNSAID MAKES ME QUITE UNEASY!

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Should Have Picked Smarter Ancestors

Mrs. Barrington Henry of 1515 Jackson st. ne., has a ready explanation for the stone marker turned up by District Liner Cotner in a lot at 12th and Savannah sts. se.

"It was the original second boundary marker for the St. Elizabeth Hospital, before Alabama ave. (formerly Hamilton rd.) was considered necessary for traffic," writes Mrs. Henry.

And how does she know? Very simple, for somebody who's more than a transient in these parts; her family has owned property in that neighborhood since 1813.

I've often wished that I had been blessed with an ancestor or two who had the foresight to buy choice real estate in 1813, but none of them ever did. I think they were waiting for prices to come down.

PIED GEOGRAPHY DEPT.

Robert Hamilton of McLean, Va., and Corpl. Maurice Wentz of Arlington, Va., escaped serious injury in a plane crash near La Plata, Md., the other day.

Walter Mitchell of 1009 Upshur st. ne., is intrigued by the headline which one of our afternoon contemporaries put on the story of the accident. It said:

"Two Arab Fliers Injured."

TIP TO TAVERN KEEPERS

Hotels and taverns which levy admission or cover charges on the basis of having television receivers are in for a battle.

Video interests have uncovered many instances where such establishments were cashing in on their television programs, and the industry may take steps to reserve these secondary profits (or a portion of them) for themselves, providing they can make their position legally air-tight.

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Peg McKinney of 5429 Connecticut ave. nw.:

I was waiting for a bus at 18th and I sts. nw. when I saw the crowd gather. Then I saw the frail old lady, with the doctor ministering to her.

A scout car wheeled up, and a policeman got out. "She's okay now," said the doctor. "She's just tired. She should go home and rest."

The patient nodded her understanding, and began gathering her limited physical resources for the journey.

"That won't do," said the policeman. "You need a taxi."

The old woman shook her head. "I don't have any money. None at all."

The policeman looked at the doctor, and the doctor looked at the policeman. Both reached into their pockets and pressed some cash into the patient's hand.

Then the policeman hailed a cab for her, and no gentler knight ever helped his lady into her coach. His badge was No. 576.

Badge No. 576 is Pvt. Joseph F. Capannelli of 406½ 8th st. se. (No. 3 Precinct).

MOMMY, CAN YOU SPARE A DIME?

Mrs. Eugene W. Scott of 5601 Oakmont ave., Bethesda, Md., reports that her neighborhood Good Humor man also uses a bell instead of a horn.

"The children can hear him a block away," she reports, "and the only annoyance we parents suffer is in supplying the dimes."

TIRESOME QUESTION

During the past week, I've asked six auto "experts" the same question:

"I have 6.50 x 16 tires, with Lifeguard tubes. How much air pressure should I carry?"

No two experts agree. Some recommended as little as 24 pounds, some as much as 32, and some prefer differing amounts in front and back. One fellow even suggested more air on the curb side of the car, to offset the usual road slant.

Now that I'm armed with all this expert advice, I face the issue by saying "Check the tires, please," and then scurry off to get a coke before the attendant can ask me how much pressure I want.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

After reading countless dispatches quoting "high Government officials," I can't help but wonder when some reporter is going to make history by quoting a low Government official.

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Morton Downey met Senator McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Senator McCarthy, the young Republican Senator from Wisconsin. Each was surprised that Downey had agreed to sing at both political conventions. "Are you a Democrat?" asked McGrath. "Are you a Republican?" asked McCarthy. . . . "Gentlemen," replied Downey, whose politics is Coca-Cola, "I'm a career man—just like you."

Harold Cohen, the Pittsburgh newspaperman, was in a cafe where he saw a handsome young naval officer in a uniform he never had seen before. He politely inquired, and the officer replied: "I'm in the Brazilian Navy." . . . "Really?" asked Cohen, "I never knew Brazil had a navy." . . . "Brazil HAS a navy," said the officer. "Didn't you see 'My Sister Eileen'?"

When Lana Turner arrived in Frankfurt and was interviewed by the local newspapermen, she told them that she planned to visit Berlin. Someone suggested that the trip might be difficult—that the Russians might stop her. "The Russians won't stop me," the screen star announced. "I've seen the Russians in the movies. Dear old Gregory Ratoff."

Alan Rinehart, of the Rinehart book-writing and publishing family, frequently visits an office on W. 44th st., across the street from the Harvard Club where he lunches. The New York W. 44th st. traffic is heavy at lunch hour. Heretofore, Mr. Rinehart always has walked to the corner to find a clear lane for his street crossing. This week he found a short-cut. The cars on W. 44th st. were bumper-to-bumper, waiting for the traffic light to change. Mr. Rinehart opened the door of a limousine, entered it, stepped out through the other door, thanked the chauffeur, opened the door of a second car, stepped out through the other door, thanked the chauffeur, and walked three more steps, into the Harvard Club.

Bruce Cabot was in El Morocco last night, cursing the Hollywood agents and their treatment of the beautiful young ladies who aspire to movie careers. "Do you feel this way about agents because they don't get jobs for these girls?" Cabot was asked . . . "No," he explained. "It's because the first thing they tell the girls is: 'Don't go out with Cabot.'"

GOP Wants Truman Nominated

By Drew Pearson

Drew Pearson today continues his series of columns on personalities holding the stage at the Democratic National Convention.)

Philadelphia.—No matter who else may be for him, there is no doubt about the fact that Harry S. Truman is the favorite Democratic candidate — of the Republican Party. GOP leaders are keeping their fingers crossed, hoping, praying that this convention will not fail to nominate their man.

Truman

Reasons behind their prayers are manifold and some quite obvious. One which is not so obvious is the fact that the Republicans have been saving up some of their juiciest scandals on the Truman Administration to be publicized this summer—after the Philadelphia convention. They don't want to break the scandals too soon; first, for fear Truman won't be nominated; second, because public memory is short.

One scandal is the contributions given to the Kansas City primary which elected Mr. Truman's hand-picked congressional candidate, Enos Axtell, in 1946. It so happens that the activities of big-talking Gen. Harry Vaughan, the White House military aide, in that campaign should make sensational reading. Only a small part of this Kansas City scandal has ever been told.

Truman's Friends

Another juicy connection which the Republicans intend to expose between now and election is the association between the White House gang and a partner of Frankie Costello, biggest king-pin gambler of the Nation.

The New York State Liquor Authority has now made public officially the long-suspected fact that William Helis, the New Orleans race horse owner, is associated with Frankie Costello and ex-convict "Dandy" Phil Castell as owners of the William Whitely Distilling Co. in Scotland. Both were pals of Lucky Luciano and the undisputed lords of the New York underworld.

This is the same William Helis whose room at the Hotel Statler Mr. Truman occupied after the Ahepa dinner at which the President spoke and Helis presided. Outside Helis's hotel room on this occasion stood John Maragon, acting as a guard in keeping other dinner guests out of the room while Mr. Truman and Mr. Helis chinned inside.

Beware Greeks Bearing Gifts

Both Maragon and Helis are Greek by birth and their obvious influence around the White House has led Republicans to wonder how much this close association had to do with selling the President on the Truman Doctrine for spending half a billion dollars in Greece. That is another thing the Republicans want to dig into.

Mixing Books and Good Will Probably the Republicans haven't got wind of it yet, but sooner or later they may also smell out some highly interesting commercial aspects about the President's recent trip to Bolivar, Mo. It illustrates how Mr. Truman unwittingly jumps into things which look perfectly innocent on the surface but which sometimes have international repercussions.

Probably he didn't know, when he agreed to go out to Bolivar to dedicate a bust of the famous South American hero that the scheme was cooked up by a publishing house, originally to promote the sale of pamphlets about Bolivar and Latin American countries.

Again it was General Vaughan, the smiling, irrepressible military aide, who sold the President on a venture which isn't going to help our relations with Latin America.

It happens that General Vaughan is a great friend of Dr. John M. C. Crane, writer of pamphlets on Latin America. Crane was looking for a way to promote the sale of his pamphlets, and approached Vaughan on the idea of setting up "The Simon Bolivar Memorial Foundation." Truman also was approached, and among other things was told that this important ceremony held in the town of Bolivar, Mo. (population 3500), would help the chance of carrying his home State.

At any rate, the Simon Bolivar Foundation was set up with Harry S. Truman as chairman and "cofounder" and John M. C. Crane also as "cofounder." With Harry Truman's name at the top it was easy to get South American Ambassadors to serve, and also easy to get the President of Venezuela to come to the United States on the special Truman airplane Independence. President Romulo Gallegos is one of the true leaders of Latin America, a former author, and a crusader for Latin American democracy. Naturally he had no idea, when he accepted the invitation, that he was playing into the hands of book promoters.

Dr. Crane, on the train to Missouri, told newsmen that he expected the Bolivar ceremony to give a big boost to the sale of his pamphlets, and that he got a royalty of a half cent on every six-cent pamphlet sold. He also estimated that he would sell 2,000,000 copies this year.

Crane is also working on a plan to sell literature on another Latin American hero, San Martin, and is promoting the sale of 250,000 copies of his San Martin pamphlet to Argentina which in turn would have them distributed in the United States.

While the trip of President Gallegos to the United States was most important, and while a statue to Bolivar in Bolivar, Mo., is a fine thing, it could have been accomplished without having been linked to a commercial scheme.

That is the kind of thing Mr. Truman sometimes naively gets tangled up in, as a result of the "Missouri Gang" around him.

THIS WEEK THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE

U. S. Public Health Service on its 150th Anniversary

● The above is a picture of a busmobile . . . housing new photo-fluorographic X-ray machines which can make X-ray pictures of chests at the rate of one a minute. Thousands of people in the United States are receiving free chest X-rays in busmobiles in their own neighborhoods . . . an invaluable service in the war against tuberculosis.

● The Public Health Service . . . is the outgrowth of America's first venture in health insurance . . . the care and relief of sick seamen. As American trade with the world increased after the Revolution, and more and more men turned to the sea for a livelihood . . . the care of sailors became an increasing problem . . . ending with the establishment of several marine hospitals.

● The Public Health Service . . . Progressed rapidly when Dr. John M. Woodworth became the first Supervising Surgeon of the Marine Hospital Service. Being a former Army medical officer, he organized the Service along military lines . . . insisted on uniforms and established entrance examinations for candidates to insure the acceptance of qualified health officers. Later, a Commissioned Corps was established with grades and pay corresponding to those of the Army and Navy.

● The Public Health Service . . . was of outstanding service during the recent war. Cooperation was carried on with the Army and Navy in inspecting ordnance plants and other military industries . . . studies were made of the effects of high altitude flying . . . improved vaccines were developed to combat yellow fever and other diseases. Six hundred Public Health Service officers were detailed to serve with the Coast Guard . . . two hundred to work with the War Shipping Administration . . . others with foreign governments under State Department auspices.

● The Public Health Service . . . maintains the largest research center in the world at Bethesda, Maryland . . . with branches at other strategic places throughout the country. It operates twenty-five hospitals and many clinics and quarantine stations. Seventeen thousand persons are employed by the Public Health Service . . . of which about two thousand are commissioned officers.

All of the material contained herein has been secured from the U. S. Public Health Service and the Library of Congress.

● Protectors of the Nation's Health . . . outstanding contributors to our individual happiness . . . are the seventeen thousand people of the U. S. Public Health Service . . . who through the years have given of themselves unstintingly to improve the health of the Nation . . . and the world. This week . . . the 150th Anniversary of its founding . . . it is fitting that we pause to consider the tremendous debt owed those pioneers of Public Health who have worked within the Health Service . . . and to look back over their accomplishments in mankind's age-old war against disease. With roots extending back to the early days of our history . . . when American mariners sailed the seven seas in tiny ships with scant facilities existing for their care and comfort . . . the Public Health Service has grown and expanded until now it encompasses many types of medical institutions, carrying on research and work in many fields . . . all with the end in view that the health of the American people . . . and people everywhere . . . will be bettered. The end results of their endeavors will be healthier, happier lives for countless millions of persons. The Hecht Company is proud to salute the people of the U. S. Public Health Service on the week of their Birthday . . . the one hundred fiftieth milestone in their long and continuing career of bettering the priceless health of all of us.
